THE REVOLUTION.

Important Acts of the New French Government.

Censorship of the Press Indirectly Abolished.

The Prussians Resume Their Advance on Paris.

Ninety Thousand French Prisoners Marching to Germany.

Graphic Account of the Surrender of Napoleon.

Reported Overtures for Peace.

Hurried Departure of the Empress from Paris.

Princess Mathilde and Sixty-two Trunks Captured.

Movements of the Ex-Emperor and Prince Imperial.

THE REVOLUTION.

Progress Made—Stolen Pictures from the Louvre—Cabinet of the Ministers of the Imperial Household—Victor Hugo on the Duty of the Hour—Appeal to the Germans.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The great French cities accept the Republic joyfully. Decrees abolishing oaths to the Empire, and abolishing stamps on journals, have been issued.

THE LOUVRE PICTURES.

M. GAMBETTA, the Secretary of the Interior, has given orders to closely watch the Count of MIEULWERKERKE, the former Superintendent of the Museum of the Louvre, until are produced all the missing paintings which have been from time to time stolen, under his administration. Orders have been givin for the arrest of M. PIETRI, lately Prefect of the Police, who is suspected of a determination to oppose the authorities. Seals have been placed on the Cabinet of Marshal VAILLANT, the Minister of the Imperial Household. The Marshal and his secretary left last night. All the Mayors of Paris have been appointed and installed in office. A large number of Prefects of Departments have also been appointed.

HUGO.

VICTOR HUGO, who has arrived here with his sons, receives ovations wherever he appears. He made a short address last night, exhorting the people to keep calm and offer a determined resistance to the enemy.

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

As the Corps Diplomatique have not received the circular usual under the circumstances, relations between France and other Powers are for the moment suspended. Nothing has been heard yet from the Cabinet of London, which is understood to purpose mediation.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

Many of the Paris journals declare that there is no time now to discuss the form of government; Frenchmen must accept the one established, and immediately prepare for a defense à Poutrance. The Constitutionnel, in its leading article, today, says: "We must, above all, be patriotic as we have never been before; such is the danger which threatens our country; and we give in our adhesion to the Government of National Defense." The same paper notices the report that JULES FAVRE had telegraphed to Washington announcing the declaration of the Republic, and expresses the hope that volunteers will come to the aid of France from the free American Republic. The Journal des Débats counsels the new Government while announcing the termination of the personal power to bear in mind that the nation is as much opposed to the personal power of eleven individuals as to that of one man. The Journal concludes by announcing that it will act with the Government.

APPEAL TO THE GERMAN DEMOCRAT.

The International Workmen's Society, in their address to the Social Democracy, say: "Prussia made war against the Emperor, not France, who now asks the withdrawal of your armies; otherwise it will be the universal duty of Frenchmen to rise and re-enact the scenes of '93. Frenchmen make no peace with the enemy on their soil; but they are the friends and allies of all free peoples. We protest against the intervention of the Powers, and implore the Prussian forces to recross the Rhine. Let us with grasped hands forget crimes prompted or perpetrated by despots. Let us form the United States of Europe; live the universal Republic."

ADDRESS TO THE ARMY.

The Journal Officiel publishes the following proclamation:

To the Army:

When a General compromises his command he is relieved; when a Government puts in peril by its own weakness the public safety it is set aside. This is just what France is doing in abolishing the dynasty responsible for all our misfortunes. She has done boldly, in the face of all the world, this great act of justice. She executes the decree under which all your conscripts have been summoned, and in the same act secures the public safety. To save itself the nation needs now but to rise en masse, and henceforth to count on two things only—its own resolution, which is invincible, and your heroism, which has never had an equal, and which, in the midst of unmerited reverses, has astonished the world. Rally round that glorious symbol which, eighty years ago, drove back all Europe united before us. Today, as at that time, the name of the Republic signifies the intimate union of the army and the people for the defense of the country."

GERMAN EXPULSION.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Prefect of Police, by the direction of the Governor of Paris, orders all Germans not provided with special permission, to quit the Department of the Seine, and the Seine-et-Oise, within twenty-four hours, beginning at 8 A. M. today, under the penalty of being sent before a military tribunal.

GREETINGS FROM SPAIN.

MADRID, Sept. 6.—Deputy CASTELLAR, in the name of the Republican minority in the Spanish Cortes, has sent to the Republican Government of France a dispatch, saying: "The Spanish minority salute in you the advent of Right and the inauguration of a new era of Liberty. Rest assured that the Republic will cause the cessation of the rivalries monarchs have created in Europe. All the Continent will form one people; all nations one family!" The address is signed by twenty Deputies of the Cortes. Great manifestations are preparing here in honor of the Republic of France. Expressions will at the same time be given to the popular demand for the abrogation of the article in the Spanish Constitution establishing monarchy as the legal form of government for Spain.

The Republic at Marseilles and in the Departments.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—At Marseilles the Departmental Committee was installed yesterday in the Prefecture, and distributed to the people thousands of guns found there. The workmen arrested several secret agents of the Police. All the sergents-de-ville have disappeared. The Prefect of the Department, with his family, left the city on Sunday night. Deputy ESQUIROS is to make a solemn entry today. The Imperial emblems were torn down in all parts of the city on Sunday, and the statue of the Emperor at the Bourse was overthrown. The agitation continues, but there is now no disorder. The Prefect of Alsace hesitated for some time to proclaim the republic in his department; he could not believe the announcement first received from Paris. At Lille the municipal corporation have distributed arms to the people, and the National Guard has been organized.

Press Censorship Abolished—Faillies in Command at Lyons—Extreme Radicalism.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Division of the Press at the Ministry of the Interior has been abolished. This puts an end to the censorship of the Press. No more foreign journals will be stopped at the frontier and the freedom of the Press at home will be absolute. The Corps of Cent Gardes has been dissolved, and the members, who are picked men, have been distributed among the other regiments. The Count DE PALIKAO resumes command of the Army of Lyons. A Council of the Government was held at the Palace of the Louvre to-day; Gen. TROCHU presided. Efforts were made by some men last night to induce the people in the faubourgs to shout "Vive la Republique Democratique et Sociale!" but it failed. The people would only hurrah for the Republic.

PROPOSED REMOVAL.

L'Opinion Nationale advises that some of the departments of the Government be removed to Bourges, which place is strongly fortified. Touching scenes occurred at the Mazas Prison when the political prisoners were released. It is reported that LEDRU ROLLIN and the Prince DE JOINVILLE and Duc D'AUMALE have entered France. The crowds have made demonstrations against the Figaro (newspaper) and ERNEST DREOLLE, editor of Le Public, for publishing a protest against the Republic.

RENTES FALLING.

PARIS, Sept. 5—Evening.—Rentes closed at 51f. 25c.

THE WAR.

The Advance on Paris—Invasion of the Bas Rhin.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The following dispatch is official:

ST. MEDERHOULD, Sept. 5.—McMAHON'S army really numbered 120,000 men. It is extirpated. The transportation to Germany of the prisoners of war, including several Generals, has commenced. The advance of the enemy on Paris continues. The Sub-Prefect of Mulhouse telegraphs to Paris that the enemy are at several points in the neighborhood, and the volunteers are hastening out to oppose them.

The French Falling Back—The Uhlans on Their Heels—M. Guizot on the War.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—A dispatch to the Liberté, from Laon, says: The troops falling back on Paris are under orders of Generals VINOY and MAHDUIT. The Uhlans have been constantly on the heels of the army since its retreat began. The Prussians, in enormous numbers, are hastening to Paris, and in four days will be in sight of the walls. They seize the peasantry on the way, and force them into the ranks.

PREPARATIONS TO RECEIVE THEM.

The authorities here are making vigorous preparations to sustain a siege. The Garde Nationale is electing officers and being detailed for defense at different parts of the fortifications.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—A circular from M. GAMBETTA says the Government is not one of intestine dissension and vain quarrel, but one of national defense, of combat to the last against the invaders.

The Prussians are at Neufchateau, marching.

LETTER FROM M. GUIZOT.

M. GUIZOT has written a long private letter to an English friend, in which he says: "France is superior to Prussia in men, money and territory, and is equal in perseverance. The age is with France and France is true to it. He deprecates, despondingly, the failure of the great object of his diplomatic career, which was to make popular on both sides of the channel the union of France and England." The letter has no date.

THE FLEET.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 6.—Admiral BOUET-WILAUMEZ, after a long conference with the French Ambassador, sailed from this port, yesterday, to concentrate his fleet on the east side of Zealand.

THE PEOPLE ARMING.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—From all parts of France news is coming in of the enthusiastic adhesion to the Republic. The people are arming and volunteers are hastening to Paris, where a large force has already assembled.

MARSHAL M'MAHON NOT DEAD.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—A Paris telegram, denying McMAHON's death, says he may recover. His wife passed through Namur, yesterday, to join him at Sedan.

A Sentiment From Sedan—Pailly—The March on Paris Resumed—Various Rumors.

LONDON, Sept. 5—Evening.—The Bavarian Corps, under Gen. VON DER TANN-RATHSAMHAUSEN, have left Sedan, which is now held by the Prussian Princes. The forces of the former will act as the escort to the French prisoners which have been placed in his charge, and which number 90,000.

VARIOUS WAR RUMORS.

The death of Gen. PAILLY is denied. Marshal McMAHON is dead at Namur, in Belgium. The bombardment of Montmédy by the Prussians began on Monday. The French Army has been ordered to retire on Paris. The Prussians have entered Rheims.

PARIS, Sept. 5—Evening.—Gen. LOWENSTEIN'S corps, composing the German advance, has arrived at Nancy, on its march to Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—VICTOR HUGO and CREMIEUX have returned to Paris. The former received an ovation.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE.

Reported Overtures from France—The Prussian Journals on English Intervention.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Daily News says JULES FAVRE, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, has already made peace propositions to Prussia. The basis of these propositions is the withdrawal of the Germans from the territory of France. France will give a guarantee that her standing army shall be abolished.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—It is reported that JULES FAVRE has gone forward to meet KING WILLIAM of Prussia.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Prussian papers continue their assaults on England's intrusive intervention, and what they call "English neutrality." The Pall Mall Gazette says: "The difficulty now is, shall France, rid of her Emperor, be made to pay for his sins, by sacrificing Alsace and Lorraine? The difficulty is presently to be received by the Prussian advance to Paris."

Open-air meetings continue to be held in various parts of England in favor of neutrality. A vast meeting of this sort took place at Birmingham, last night.

JULES FAVRE'S OVERTURE.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Gaulois says the report that JULES FAVRE has gone to the head-quarters of the King of Prussia, seems to be confirmed by the fact that he did not appear, yesterday, at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Some journals contradict this report.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Pall Mall Gazette says the Prussians have utterly broken and defeated the Emperor and France, and it would be credulous now to doubt. Only one or two strong frontier places like Strasbourg would be retained as guarantees.

THE SURRENDER AT SEDAN.

Dr. Busch's Account—Surprise of Bismarck at Napoleon's Appearance at His Quarters—His Reception of the Fallen Emperor—Their Conversation—The Question of Peace.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Dr. BUSCH, writes to the Times, from Sedan, the 2d, further particulars of the affair at Sedan, as follows: "When the Emperor, who had passed the weary hours of the night, looked out in the early morning, he beheld a forest of steel and iron on the valley and hill-tops, batteries posted on every eminence, cavalry in all the plains, and as far as his eye could reach the heads of embattled Germans, his decision was taken. At last, attended by a few of his staff on horseback, His Majesty proceeded along the road from Sedan in a brougham. Count BISMARCK was in bed in his quarters at Donchery, when an officer rushed in, and announced that the Emperor was coming to meet him and to see the King. Count BISMARCK rose, and dressed hastily, you may be sure, in the white-peaked cap with yellow band, dark uniform coat with metal buttons and yellow facings, and hastened to meet the Emperor. He was in time to stop the cortège outside of the town. I was away on the field, and therefore cannot of my own personal knowledge, state what occurred.

MEETING BETWEEN NAPOLEON AND BISMARCK.

As His Majesty alighted I hear that Count BISMARCK uncovered his head, and stood with his cap in hand, and on a sign or request from the Emperor put it on. The Count replied; "Sire, I receive your Majesty as I would my own royal master." There happened to be near the place where the interview occurred, a few hundred yards outside the squalid town of Donchery, the humble cottage of a hand-loom weaver, of whom there are numbers around Sedan. Count BISMARCK led the way, and entered it. The room was not inviting. The great Count walked up the stairs. The apartment was filled by the hand-loom and appliances of the weaver; so he descended, and found the Emperor sitting on a stone outside. Two chairs were brought out of the cottage. The Emperor sat down in one; Count BISMARCK took the other and placed it on His Majesty's left-hand side. The officers in attendance on their fallen master lay down some distance away upon a small plot of grass in front of the cottage. The conversation was a strange one, and as Count BISMARCK has repeated it freely, or the principal parts of it, no doubt it will be soon known and remain forever as historic.

TALK ABOUT PEACE.

The great point to be gained was peace; but, as far as His Imperial Majesty was concerned, no assurance of it could be obtained by Count BISMARCK. The Emperor stated that he had no power, could not negotiate a peace, could not give orders to the army or Marshal BAZAINE. The Empress was Regent of France, and on her and her Ministers must devolve the negotiations. So Count BISMARCK thereupon remarked that it was of no avail to hold any further conversation on political matters with His Majesty, and that it would be of no use to see the King. The Emperor desired to see the King in person, but Count BISMARCK declared it was not possible to accede to His Majesty's wishes until the capitulation had been signed. Then, as the conversation was becoming rather dangerous, and as the situation was becoming difficult on both sides, they ended it. The interview terminated, Count BISMARCK went to see the King; the Emperor withdrew to consult his officers.

SIGNING THE ARTICLES OF CAPITULATION.

At 11½ o'clock the articles of capitulation were signed as agreed upon by Gen. WIMPFFEN and Gen. VON MOLTKE, and, I believe, Count BISMARCK took part in the deliberation. The terms are:

"The garrison and army of Sedan to surrender as prisoners of war, to be sent into Germany; officers to be liberated on parole not to serve again during the war; all horses, guns and munitions of war to be given up."

The Emperor's detention in Germany was understood to be a part of the stipulation.

THE KING AND THE EMPEROR.

About 2 o'clock the King, with his body guard and escort of cuirassiers, attended by the Crown Prince and staff of general officers, proceeded to a chateau outside Sedan, and received the Emperor, who came with his personal followers and staff, in charge of an escort, which was ranged on the other side of the avenue facing the cuirassiers. The King and his captive retired into the glass house off one of the saloons of the drawing-room floor, and they could be seen by the staff outside engaged in earnest dialogue. After the interview with the King, the Emperor had a few moments conversation with the Crown Prince, during which he was much agitated when alluding to the manner of the King.

THE EMPEROR HUMILIATED.

His great anxiety seems to be not to be exhibited to his own soldiers. The result was, however, that His Majesty, wishing to avoid one mischief was exposed to a great humiliation, for his course had to be altered to avoid Sedan, and thus he had to pass through the lines of the Prussian Army.

Departure of the Emperor for Germany—Despondent Appearance of the Deposed Monarch.

DOUCHERY, Sept. 3—9 A. M.—The Emperor a prisoner of war, has just passed below my window, through the main street of Douchery. It is raining torrents. A column of Würtemberg troops coming in the opposite direction blocks up the way. The cortège was preceded by a troop of black hussars in full uniform and unclosked. Then came the brougham with the Emperor. He was in the kept undress uniform of a Lieutenant-General, with the star of the Legion of Honor on his breast. His face looked, exceedingly wan, with dark lines under his eyes, which were observant of what was passing around, for he saluted the Englishman who ran out to see him and raised his hat. By his side sat a French officer, I think ACHILLE MURAT. But who could look at any one but the one man, and it was only a glance any person with good feeling would care to give.

At such a moment, even to him, the horses were worthy of the Imperial stables. Two postillions were as smart as if in the Bois or on route for St. Cloud on a wet day. Tony and the two who sat behind wore long water-proof cloaks, glazed hats and the Imperial cockade. As the brougham was stopped for a moment my courier caught sight of His Majesty's face. "What a change," he says, "since the Prince NAPOLEON lodged in my house in London, before he went to live in King-street." He had his hand to his moustache, which had the well-known point and waxed ends. But there was no nervous twitching, and the emotion which shook him for a moment when he was speaking to the Crown Prince yesterday of the King's manner had passed away. Then he brushed the tears from his eyes with the gloves he had in one hand, and was overcome for several seconds.

AFTER THE REVERSE.

After the brougham came a close-a'hane, with Normandy parchevans filled with Prussian officers smoothly shaved with mode drawn over their hopie and caps. Among the latter were Gen. BOURBI and the Prince of LIPPAMA, who are appointed to wait on His Majesty. Some ten or eleven Imperial carriages, chargeabans, fourgons, with superb horses, and filled with officers, followed; then some French officers on horseback; and after a long string of saddle and ranfort horses. Hidden by grooms, sixty or more in number, the rear being closed with troops of black horse.

NO SYMPATHY SHOWN BY THE PEOPLE.

I leave it to others to moralize on the spectacle. I shall not say a word about fallen greatness. Every one will be ready with the trite saying. No one cried "God bless him!" The Frenchmen and women who stood out in the rain certainly did not venture to show any sympathy or sorrow, if they felt any. The only sound was the tramp of horses, and the inopportune jingling of bells of chara'bans and harnis; but now and then a chorus was sung by the Wurtembergers trudging through the mud; celebrating the victory in which, so far as they are concerned, they had, with doubtless regret, little to do.

General Wimpffen's Explanation—Troops Retiring on Paris—Baseline.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Gen. DE WIMPFFEN, who surrendered Sedan, publishes a long explanation in the Paris papers regarding its position at the time of the surrender. In it he states that he had recently arrived from Algeria, and was immediately ordered to a command under McMAHON at Sedan. On his arrival there he found McMAHON suffering from severe wounds in his hip and back, resulting from the explosion of a shell, fragments of which had struck him, incapacitating him from the active direction of the movements of his army. Gen. WIMPFFEN was thus compelled to assume command of an army which was already beaten. Though ignorant of the position, still he refused to sign articles of capitulation. The Prussians produced a map which showed the position of the German troops and batteries, and convinced him that the destruction of the French Army was inevitable. Then, only, was the surrender concluded.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The corps of Gen. VINOY has reached Laon on the retrograde movement. The corps of VINOY is intact, and falling back in good order.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—BAZAINE still maintains his position at Metz, notwithstanding the strength of the army guarding and preventing his escape from the fortress.

The total force now under arms in France, including the Garde Nationale and the Garde Mobile, is 700,000.

PARIS.

The Mayor's Proclamation—The Corps Legislatif Doors Sealed—Various Acts of the New Powers—The Universal Republic.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Mayor has issued the following proclamation:

HOTEL DE VILLE, PARIS, Sept. 6.

CITIZENS: I have been called by the people and Government of the National Defense to the Mayoralty of Paris. While waiting for you to be called to elect your municipality, I take possession of this City Hall in the name of the Republic, which is the crown of the patriotic events of 1792, 1830, and 1848. I speak to you now as our fathers did in 1792. Citizens, the country is in danger; rally around the Parisian municipality, defended, today, from siege by a soldier of the Republic. Vive la Republique!

ETIENNE ARAGO.

THE POLICE AND NATIONAL GUARD.

The Prefect of Police Secretary has placed seals on the doors of the Corps Legislatif. All the Police of Paris have been incorporated with the National Guard. M. ROUHER quitted Paris last night.

ACTS OF THE NEW GOVERNMENT.

The Rue Dix Decembre has been renamed Quartre Septembre. The Avenue l'Empereur becomes Rue Victor Noir. The Journal Officiel of the Republic today publishes a proclamation to the army, exhorting it to rally around the glorious flag, which, eighty years ago, drove back all Europe. The new Government has revoked the functions of the ollowing Ambassadors to foreign Courts: The Marquis DE LAVALETTE, at London; the Count DE MAUBOURG, at Vienna; and Gen. FLEURY, at St. Petersburg. A decree has been issued requiring the withdrawal of all Germans from Paris.

THE UNIVERSAL REPUBLIC.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The International Society of Paris has issued an address to the Social Democracy of Germany, imploring the Prussians to recross the Rhine. The address closes as follows: "Let us with grasped hands forget the crimes prompted or perpetrated by despots. Let us form the United States of Europe. 'Vive the Universal Republic!'"

Proclamation of the Prefect of Police—The People Invited to the Exercise of Political Rights.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Prefect of the Police issued the following proclamation:

Policemen and Inhabitants of Paris:

After being for nineteen years under cruel blows, the traditions interrupted on the 18th Brumaire and the 2d of December are at last resumed. The Deputies of the Left, after the withdrawal of their colleagues, have by a majority proclaimed the decree of déchéance. Soon afterward the Republic was proclaimed from the Hotel de Ville. The revolution, which has just taken place, has been a pacific one. It was understood that no French blood should flow except on the field of battle. It has for its object, as in 1792, the repression of the foreign force. It behooves, therefore, the inhabitants of Paris, by their self-possession, and the manliness of their attitude, to continue to show themselves equal to the task that they and the nation have undertaken. For this reason, invested by the Government with the powers that have been so much abused under previous régimes, I invite the inhabitants of Paris to the exercise of those political rights which they have just reconquered, to the fullest extent possible consistent with wisdom and moderation, and to show France and the world that we are indeed worthy of liberty. Our duty in the circumstances in which we have been placed is, above all, to remember that the country is in danger, and that France, under the auspices of Republican liberty, prepares to vanquish or die. I am certain that my powers will only be used to defend you from the blows of those who seek to betray the country. KERATRY.

THE CORPS LEGISLATIF.

Saturday Night and Sunday Morning's Session—M. Favre's Propositions of Forfeiture Against the Empire.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The following is a sketch of the proceedings in the Corps Legislatif on Saturday night and Sunday morning: The Corps Legislatif, which had only taken a recess, reassembled at 11½ A. M. on Sunday, after an exciting session in the evening, at which the Ministers had explained their situation.

President SCHNEIDER said: Painful and grave news was communicated to us during the evening, and as President of the House I had a double duty to perform toward it and the nation. For the rest, by an urgent demand on the part of a great number of my colleagues, you have been called together in extraordinary session. I allow, therefore, the floor to the Minister of War that he may finish a statement which he commenced during this morning's sitting.

Count PALIKAO said: I have the painful mission to inform you what my words before must have foreshadowed. The news which was only semi-official has become official. After heroic efforts the army has been rolled back into Sedan and has been encompassed there by such superior forces that it has been obliged to capitulate, and the Emperor has been made a prisoner. In view of this news it will be impossible to enter upon serious discussion of the consequences which these events may involve when I have been forced to leave my bed to attend this sitting, and my colleagues have had no opportunity to deliberate.

President SCHNEIDER proposed an adjournment until today at noon. He said the situation imposed on him great duties, and he would fill them. But the Ministry not having yet been able to deliberate, and each one needing time to think over carefully the grave resolutions which the occasion required, he thought it would be wise to adjourn.

JULES FAVRE said: If the Chamber is of opinion that, in the grievous and grave situation described by the Minister of War, it should adjourn until noon, I will not oppose it; but we believe it to be our duty to seize the occasion to lay before the House a proposition which the existing situation demands. We will not add one word to the text which we now lay before you. We move that the Chamber adopt the following resolutions:

"That LOUIS NAPOLEON BONAPARTE and his dynasty have ceased to reign, and the powers which his nation conferred upon them.

"That there shall be chosen an Executive Commission, consisting of members, the number of whom shall be fixed by the Chamber, which shall be invested with all the powers necessary to repel invasion and drive the enemy from the soil.

"That Gen. TROCHU, Governor of Paris, be charged exclusively with the defense of the capital."

The reading of these resolutions was listened to in profound silence. A single voice was raised. It was that of M. PINARD: "We have not the power," said he, to "pronounce the déchéance."

President SCHNEIDER returned to his proposal to adjourn the sitting until noon, on account of the gravity of what had happened. The Corps Legislatif agreed, and the sitting was adjourned.

THE EX-IMPERIAL FAMILY.

Hasty Departure of the Empress from the Tuileries—The Imperial Apartments—The Princess Clotilde the Last to Leave the Palace.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—It is now positively asserted that the Empress left Paris Sunday afternoon, going to Belgium to rejoin the Prince Imperial. She quitted the Palace by the entrance on the quay, having with her but a servant. In the morning FERDINAND D'LESSEPS, a relative of the Empress, went to her and advised that she sign her abdication. She seemed to agree to this, and taking the project of the act went to the hall where the Ministers sat in council. They all declared she must not sign the paper. Princess CLOTILDE, say the journals, was the last of the Imperial family to leave the Palace. She has gone to Prangins, where her children are. It was evident from the appearance of the rooms in the Palace that the departure of the Empress was hasty. Trunks were piled about in various places; hand-boxes and articles of apparel were lying about in disorder, and the bed was not made. In the Emperor's room were a number of hats, on all sides empty cigar-boxes, a great number of phials containing phosphate of iron, books, papers, a revolver-case, and piles of journals. In the room of the Prince Imperial were his books and an unfinished historical exercise written in a plain round hand. On the floor his leaden soldiers were lying about.

INGRATITUDE—MODERATION OF THE TROOPS.

It is stated that the official remaining in charge of the Palace said all those whom the Empress had so favored deserted her, and not one remained to see her off. Nothing inside the Palace was injured. Some of the National Guard required the cooks to prepare them a meal, and drank some of the wine in the Imperial cellars, but nothing else was touched. The "N" on the railings about the Palace was torn off, or covered with rags and handkerchiefs. A strong force is posted in front of the new Academy of Music, to prevent the mob injuring that building. The Provisional Government makes known that it will permit no such excesses.

A COMPANION IN CAPTIVITY.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Duke DE PERSIGNY started last night for Belgium, to join the Emperor and share his captivity.

ENGLAND AGAPE.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Times announced today that the Prince Imperial was at Ostend last night, and might be expected to arrive in London today. The railway stations here and at Dover are thronged with people curious to see the Prince, but he has not yet made his appearance. The Duke DE GRAMMONT, who has for some days occupied lodgings at Dover, came to London this afternoon.

Arrest of the Princess Mathilde—The Crown Jewels—The Prince Imperial—Will the Ex-Emperor go to England?

PARIS, Sept. 6.—The Princess MATHILDE was arrested yesterday at Fuys, in Normandy, and was conducted to Dieppe, where she is under guard. Her baggage, consisting of sixty-two trunks, has been retained for examination. It was reported that the crown jewels had been taken, but it is contradicted—they are in the Bank of France.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 6.—The Independance Belge intimates that the Prince Imperial has left for England already, via Ostend.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Globe says the Prince Imperial was sent hither because he is ill.

THE EX-EMPEROR IN GERMANY.

COLOGNE, Sept. 5.—At 2 o'clock this afternoon the French Emperor passed here without stopping, the engines having been changed outside the city. The train consisted of ten cars. It left Verviers at 11 o'clock this forenoon, and Aix la Chapelle at noon. Another long train, with the Imperial household preceded it. The various railway stations were thronged with crowds of people, who were curious to catch a glimpse of the Emperor.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—NAPOLEON is accompanied in his exile by Gen. CASTELNAU, the Prince DE LA MOSKOWA, and Counts DE GENLIS, DE WAUBERT, REILLE and PAJOL, all of his personal staff.

WILL HE GO TO ENGLAND?

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Agents here are said to be negotiating for Brasted Park, in Kent, as a residence for NAPOLEON....The Empress will embark with the Prince Imperial from Ostend, for England today, probably.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 6—4 P. M.—The Empress EUGENIE is about leaving for England.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Recognition of the New Government by Austria—The Press on the Change—Anxiety for Details in Madrid.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Contrary to the assertion of certain German papers at Vienna and elsewhere, it is stated semi-officially at Vienna, in view of the possible changes at Paris, that instructions had been sent Prince METTERNICH, that he must continue his relations with the Government de facto.

The Times and other morning papers accept the French revolution with favor, as the clear expression of the national will. They anticipate no disorder. The Times also has every good wish for the French statesmen now seeking to re-establish the Government and preserve order. It expects, as a matter of course, that a new Constitution will be made.

MADRID, Sept. 6.—There is great excitement here over the news from Paris. Perfect order is maintained, but there is the greatest anxiety to learn the details.

FUGITIVES.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Ex-Minister CHEVREAU has arrived at Brussels. The Duke DE GRAMMONT'S arrival at Dover is reported.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The authorities of Brussels have voted 100,000 francs for the sick and wounded of both armies.

German Rejoicings in Various Parts of the Country.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 6.—The Germans of this city fired one hundred guns, yesterday afternoon, in celebration of the Prussian victories. They will celebrate formally with songs and speeches at Allyn Hall on Wednesday night.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 6.—Extensive preparations are being made for a German mass-meeting, to be held here on Wednesday evening, at the Sengerfest Hall, to celebrate the German victories. All the German societies will participate. Speeches will be made, and there will be an illumination.

TERRE HAUTE, Sept. 5.—The Germans of this city held a grand jubilee last evening. One hundred guns were fired, and a large meeting was held at Turner Hall.

Proclamation of the Prussian Governor of Lorraine—Irish Sympathy.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—Gen. BOURBI, the Prussian Governor of Lorraine, has issued a proclamation to the people of the province. After citing from the royal decree of the 11th of August, he promises security of person and property of peaceable citizens, exacting in return implicit obedience to the authorities, civil and military.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Meetings were held yesterday at Limerick and Kilkenny to sympathize with the French.

Appointment of a New Prefect—Burning of the Library.

PARIS, Sept 6.—M. GAMBETTA has issued a proclamation appointing EDMUND VALENTIN Prefect of Strasbourg, and for the Department of Bas-Rhin. "The country depends upon his energy and patriotism to mock and defend his post." The burning of the Strasbourg library, one of the most useful and valuable in Europe, owing to the variety of its treasures, seems fully verified.

GERMAN SUPERIORITY.

An Answer to M. de Girardin—A Bet by a Prussian Officer—Comprehensive Review of the Causes of the Downfall of France—Five Reasons for German Superiority—Germany in the Future.

Translated from La Liberté.

ST. AVOLD, Aug. 19, 1870.

M. de Girardin:

One of our numerous countrymen at Paris will see that you receive these few words, by way of answer to your blusterings, which have caused as noisy an hilarity in our camp as one of our bombardments. You have made one bet, and I will make you another. I promise, on my honor, to pay to you 20,000 francs if my regiment does not file past your residence in the Avenue du Roi-de-Rome before the 15th of next September. Do you know why we feel so confident of conquering you? Tell your friends, if you wish to; but do not keep back a single word of what I intend to say. We shall conquer you:

First.—Because we have the moral support of all Europe.

Second.—On account of the superiority of our artillery.

Third.—Because we ALL wish for German unity. (The idea of annexations comes from your Emperor, who has had as imitators MM. DE CAVOUR and DE BISMARCK.)

Fourth.—Because our soldiers are well commanded, and we have among us none of those divided interests, principles, or that insubordination prevalent among your Gardes Mobiles, whom we fear as much as we would college students. Each of our soldiers is as well instructed as one of your officers.

Fifth.—Because we fight for civilization: in other words for the emancipation of man by education.

How is it that a man like you has not seen that the future belongs to the northern or Protestant races? Look at the United States of America! What do the little States belonging to the Latin race amount to when compared with them? Little Republics always engaged in civil warfare, without moral force, without other religion than the superstition of their ancestors, the Inquisitors? In Europe, are not both the Peninsulas and France on the road to decay? Uselessly would we give a king to Spain; your Catholic neighbor ought to be able to teach you the state of that country. Italy is degenerating under the shadow of the same prejudices; Catholicism becomes idiotic, (is that good French?) France has declined ever since she consigned her safety to the protection of a man who has always lied as much to us as to you.

You see to what twenty years of despotism have led you; you wished the Empire to mean peace, and it has been the synonym of war, invasion and the loss of two provinces, for we propose to keep them. You attached yourselves to the Bonapartist dynasty through fear of "socialism? That is to say, you sought to avoid Charybdis and you fell into Scylla. Just look at the condition of things: from NAPOLEON I. we and Europe have retaken the conquests of the republic; from the second of the name we will take the ninth part of your country, without reference to the expenses of the war, which you are going to defray. God is with those who wish for progress; that is why He has forsaken you. (Do you happen to believe in God?) You have universal suffrage, and your voters know not how to read; that is your most dangerous weapon. Forsooth without your LEDRU ROLLIN you would not have had that; but Providence always manages things for the best. Germany, classic land of liberty, which had a LUTHER when logic was unknown among you; Germany is destined to be for Europe what FRANKLIN'S country is for America.

Do not forget my bet, and answer to me at Geneva, No. 8 Rue Mont Blanc.

CITY WAR NEWS.

The Fenians Awaiting an Opportunity to Take Part in the Conflict—Facts and Rumors.

The members of the Fenian Brotherhood in this City are at this moment on the very tiptoe of excitement. The utmost anxiety is visible on every countenance because of the rumored likelihood of England's becoming an ally of Prussia against the French, if the latter refuse to accede to King WILLIAM'S terms of peace. Russia and Austria will oppose these allies in their favor, and will aid the French in their continuance of the war. Here, then, the Fenians assert, will be afforded the long-looked-for moment to strike a blow at England advantageously, and they will volunteer by thousands to fight beneath the tri-color. It was to take advantage of such a contingency as this that the Irish Directory was established in this City, and now that there seems to be the slightest possibility of the accomplishment of their wishes, hundreds of Irishmen in America are willing and ready to go to France if the transportation be afforded them. Many there are who are able to defray their own expenses thither, and would gladly contribute toward paying those of others if they only had the assurance that their swords would be accepted on arriving there. So far they lack this assurance, and hesitate to move in the matter. Yet they do not stand still idly awaiting further developments; on the contrary, numerous and frequent offers are being made hourly, we are informed, to the French Consul and Ministers here of men who understand the use of the arms with which the Brotherhood will furnish themselves. That this is a preconcerted and united movement we learn from many members of the organization; but that it will come to anything more than the attempt seems highly improbable. Nevertheless, we are assured by persons well-versed in all the ramifications of the Order that if France determines to continue the struggle to the bitter end, there will be 100,000 fighting Celts, fully armed and equipped, ready to take the field against England and Prussia in the northeastern provinces of France within a month, and that there will also be a simultaneous uprising of the "men in the gap" in Ireland powerful and vigorous enough to keep a large English army busy.

This movement has the heartiest good wishes, and, if once set afoot, the most earnest cooperation of the French residents in New-York. The wealthy Frenchmen are prepared to contribute largely to the funds for the furtherance of the enterprise, we have been informed, and not a few of them will accompany any such expedition. One man, [illegible] Frenchman, told us that he will give every cent he has in the world, amounting to $60,000, to help the movement. His is not an isolated instance of the ardor of our Gallic citizens. There are many more.

Every effort has been put forth by the Irish Directory, since the outbreak of the war, to marshal their forces and get them in readiness for this crisis. We learn that the branch societies started in the different wards have done much work. In short, our informant tells us that there are many men ready to move at a moment's notice, and to take passage to France. In Ireland preparations have been long completed, and already many men have crossed the Channel in fishing-smacks and hookers from the west and south-west of Kerry and Cork. Numbers, too, it is rumored, have sailed from this country for France every week since the first of August. More await the turn of the tide of war and England's alliance with Prussia.

Meeting of French and Irish—Troops for France—Letter from Father O'Leary.

An enthusiastic meeting of the French citizens and their Irish sympathizers was held at Hibernia Hall, No. 48 Prince-street, last evening. About 400 Frenchmen were present, besides several Irishmen. Cries of "Vive la Republique, Ireland and France," were heard every few minutes. Mr. DESBOULY presided, and made a fervent, patriotic speech. He commenced by thanking the Provisional Government for accepting the inheritance left by the cowards who betrayed France. He said that the Republic was bound to conquer, and that it would establish its principles all over Europe. He also denounced NAPOLEON and paid a handsome tribute to the Irish, claiming them as the allies of France. Messrs. COSTANZO and VILLA subsequently made short addresses, after which the following letter was read from Father O'LEARY:

NO. 31 WEST FOURTEENTH-STREET, MONDAY EVENING.

To the French and American Republicans:

"Vive la France," "Vive la Republique." The war is now, not NAPOLEON against KING WILLIAM, but the French people against King or Emperor WILLIAM; Democracy against Cæsarism, liberty against tyranny, the nineteenth century civilization against medieval feudalism, the sovereignty of the people against the divine rights of tyrants. America must be with you, be with us, be with us. Liberty, intelligence and patriotism are for us. "Vive la Republic Francaise," "Vive la Republic Irlandoise." (Signed,) O'LEARY.

ARRIVAL OF THE CITY OF LONDON AND RUSSIA.

The Inman steam-ship City of London, and the Cunard steam-ship Russia reached this port yesterday. The latest advices are dated Aug. 27, from Liverpool, and Aug. 28, from Queenstown. They are fresher than those at hand on Monday, by four days.

BELEAGUERED PARIS.

The Fortifications of the City—Its Capacity for Sustaining a Long Siege—Food Supplies—The Chances.

From a Military Correspondent.

PARIS, Wednesday, Aug. 24, 1870.

Under the seeming prospect of a siege of this city and of its investment by the Prussian forces, it will be interesting to your readers to learn something about the fortifications of the French capital, of the preparations made against this eventuality, and of its powers of resistance. Therefore, I give you some facts upon these topics, gained from personal observation or gleaned from the best sources of information. At this moment it seems that the Crown Prince of Prussia is determined to do what few Generals have ever dared to do—march into the very heart of the enemy's country, leaving behind him hostile armies and well-fortified towns. The ghost of VAUBAN should rest uneasy in its grave at this rude violation of all military rule and precedent; and if the success of this bold movement should be complete, we must put the works of that great man among the treasures of the past, and push old CONSTANTINE upon the back shelves of our libraries. Gen. SHERMAN's march through Georgia will be repeated, but upon a larger and grander scale. No one can think of this movement without admiring its boldness; nor can we reflect upon its consequences or its possible results without feeling that it is the most hazardous piece of military work ever attempted by any General. The Crown Prince has not to meet a horde of unorganized barbarians, like ALEXANDER in ASIA, but a large and dashing army and a brave and patriotic people; and it may be that he under-estimated the strength of the army he is about to meet and counts too much upon internal dissensions among the French. In these times of great and sudden surprises it is hard to predict, with any degree of certainty, the result of future movements, but it seems to me that success depends upon an immediate entry into Paris. Why, I shall show further on, when giving the obstacles to be encountered. If he fails, the whole world will condemn the Crown Prince for so foolhardy a movement. On the other hand, there is nothing so successful as success, and if he wins he will be raised to the pinnacle of military greatness.

THE ADVANCE.

With a boldness unparalleled, the Prussian Armies are advancing upon Paris, and the inhabitants of the French capital are just now beginning to comprehend the fact that a siege is possible, and even probable. The news has come upon them so gradually that no alarm is felt, and there is still an untiring confidence in the army; and, behind all this, there is an unbounded confidence in the powers of resistance which can be offered when the enemy are upon the banks of the Seine. If we can place reliance upon official documents, Marshal BAZAINE has, despite his losses in the recent engagements, an army of more than one hundred thousand men. This force has the strongly-fortified and well-provisioned town of Metz for its base. France has actually put in the field, or has under arms, 550,000 soldiers. Adding to this effective force the total of the Mobiles, the Garde Nationale, the Franc-Tireurs and the Sapeurs-Pompiers, there will be 1,400,000 men of all arms. This does not embrace the new army which will be brought out by the law of the 10th of August, which calls to the defense of the flag the men of from twenty-five to thirty-five years, who are unmarried or widowers without children, and who have never been soldiers. Arms are not lacking. The arsenals are full of munitions; the French seaports are encumbered with shipping; and the facility with which the war loan was taken shows that the resources of money are abundant. Add to this a proud, spirited, patriotic people, burning to revenge the humiliations they have endured, and we can form some idea of the first general difficulties with which the Crown Prince of Prussia has to contend. History shows us by numberless examples how hard a thing it is to conquer such a people—a nation of forty millions—and if the French nation is conquered it will be by the greater energy of the Germans, which enabled the Crown Prince to strike crushing and paralyzing blows before the enemy was really ready for the conflict.

OBSTACLES.

But there are powerful obstacles other than those enumerated above to be encountered by the invading army. Admitting that the Prussians are advancing upon the capital by turning the French position at Chalons—admitting that the French are falling back upon Paris, and we have then to consider that the Crown Prince is weakening his army every league that he advances, while the French are falling back upon their strongest position. Upon their right, and ready to pounce upon their rear or to cut their communications, the Prussians will have Marshal BAZAINE, upon their left the new army now being formed upon the Loire, and in their front the main body of the regular troops—three hundred thousand, men with the fortifications of Paris. New armies will spring up in the south; and to show another resource I may mention the fact that two Cafds arrived yesterday from Algeria, who come to offer the Government twenty thousand Kabylies, cavalry, to be mounted and equipped at their expense. With a little time new armies will spring up on all sides, and it is for time that the French are struggling. And the Crown Prince would never dare brave this gathering storm if he did not feel that his army was irresistible, and that he could either carry Paris by storm or end the war by diplomatic settlement beneath its walls.

THE FORTIFICATIONS.

The failure to carry the fortifications of Paris at once must, it seems to me, prove highly disastrous. The French capital is a fortified city of the first order. Every means known to the science of engineering, all the aids which experience could give and the skill of clever Generals suggest, have been applied to the works around Paris—works which have been shown with pride for some years past. Yet, in modern warfare, it is still an open and disputed question how far, if at all, the best devised fortifications, the finest system of bastions, salients and curtains are superior to the earth-works which may be thrown up in a few weeks' time. Even the strongest fortresses have fallen again and again. "Here, Sire," said VAUBAN, handing the keys of Verdun to the King, "is a fortress which all my art would not suffice to take;" yet VAUBAN lived to see that very fortress taken three times. It was this same VAUBAN who first conceived the idea of surrounding Paris with a double fortified enciente, and to make it play an important part in the defense of the country. Thus we see that during and since the reign of LOUIS XV., the state of things which exists today was not only conceived but freely discussed. LOUIS XV. refused to grant the money necessary for the commencement of the plans proposed by VAUBAN, and it was only in 1833 that a system of permanent fortification was begun. In that year, Marshal SOULT demanded from the Chamber of Deputies a credit of thirty-five millions, for the purpose of putting Paris in a state of defense. After much trouble, the money was granted, and seventeen pentagonal forts were established, eleven upon the right bank of the Seine and six upon the left. These were the ordinary detached casemate forts, of no manner of use at the present day, and cast aside as early as the year 1840 for the present perfected system. This consists of two lines of fortifications surrounding the city; the first a series of detached works, capable of being provisioned and of being used for the purpose of retarding the enemy; the second, the most complete line of works, around the entire city, which ever resulted from engineering skill. The fortifications of this second line are all bastioned, and comprise, first, the zone of fire, of about three hundred yards, cleared of all things which could shelter an enemy, and within which no means are left for the construction of earth-works by night; second, the military ground, or zone of fortification proper, embracing counter-scarp, fosse, escarp, the glacis and fouquette, with almost every other term employed in engineering. This line is a zigzag, with sharp salient angles; it connects the strong bastions with each other, and forms an unbroken line round the greater part of the city. Anything more formidable than these works would be difficult to imagine. Necessarily the line is broken at the points where the public roads diverge, but here the line is doubly strengthened by a series of outworks, mounted with heavy cannon, the approaches to which are covered by both casemate and barbette guns. The bastions are really fully armed and equipped forts, with casemates and loopholes for musketry; and upon the whole line guns are mounted en barbette, and there are broad glacis where batteries of howitzers, field-guns or of the deadly mitrailleuse could be used with terrible effect. The ditch is nearly twenty feet in width; the walls of the scarp, on an average, along the curtain, ten feet in height and four feet in thickness,—the bastions, of course, being higher, thicker, stronger and more heavily armed than the rest. Thus we see that the sieger allows of a double fire upon any given point in the zone, while the same point is swept by two or more of the bastions. With some experience in the matter of fortification, I am free to confess that this line of works seems to be utterly beyond criticism, and when once beneath the walls, (if he ever does get there,) I do not think that the Crown Prince would be rash enough to order an assault. Upon this formidable line of works guns of all calibre are mounted, the heavy cannon sweeping the approaches to the town. To attempt a siege within the radius covered by these guns would be simply murderous. To establish a complete blockade beyond their range would require a million of men. There would be a line of eighteen miles to maintain, placing the besieging army beyond the sphere of action from these forts, and to attempt such a feat is simply absurd. The most that could be done would be to concentrate the force upon the principal avenues leading from the city. And here, again, the besiegers would be at great disadvantage. Running entirely around the city, and sufficiently protected, is a circular railway, by which the French could throw large bodies of men upon any given point in a very short space of time, and with its aid the effect of sudden sallies, nearly always successful for the time, is greatly increased.

CITY SUPPLIES.

But supposing all of these difficulties overcome, and such a supposition is hardly within the bounds of reason, we may ask if Paris is really prepared for a siege in the way of provisions? I am confident that there is enough for many months—enough to keep the city and its garrison from want until armies from without could arise to harass the besieging army, cut off its communication, and force it to maintain a concentration which would be fatal. The provisioning of the city has not been forgotten, and vast buildings for the reception of commissary stores have risen with the military works. These are being now filled with grain; and, following the advice of the authorities, the country people are bringing their produce into the city to be stowed in the public or private warehouses, free of expense. There is flour enough for one year. The annual consumption of meat takes about 110,000 head of cattle, and care is being taken to have more than a year's supply on hand. The preparation of meat is well conducted. All of the old butchering establishments have been suppressed, and one large and splendid abattoir erected at La Villette. It is in a thinly inhabited section, near the St. Denis canal, and close to the circular railroad mentioned above. In connection with this public establishment there are buildings for the stock and a market capable of holding five thousand oxen and 30,000 sheep at a time. Upon these two important points Paris is ready; and as for water, the Seine runs through the very heart of the city. Wine is a very important part of the French commissariat, and is as necessary to the soldiers as meat or bread. Deprived of wine, the public health would suffer, and the public spirits fail; hence it becomes a question of necessity to see that there is a supply. The average annual consumption of wine in Paris is about 3,154,414 hectolitres, or nearly seventy millions of gallons; but in private cellars alone there is this amount of wine, and the public store-house, comprising eight large buildings, is well supplied.

In addition to this I find the spirit of the people admirable—a fine thing in case of a siege. The Prussian military writers themselves acknowledge the great strength of Paris, but they count upon the Republicans as allies—a dependence which will fall them in the hour of need. I believe that Paris is, or will be when necessary, in a perfect state of defence. With no opposition, the army of invasion could not reach the capital in less than eight days; and when the 140 bridges are destroyed, and when MCMAHON stands in the way, the time may be extended considerably, if not indefinitely. Looking at it with a military eye, I am perfectly convinced that, after the 1st day of September next, France could make her best fight upon the banks of the Seine. W. E.

PROPHETIC WORDS.

Prevost-Paradol on the Struggle with Prussia.

The last chapter of M. PREVOST PARADOL's last work, La France Nouvelle, says the Pall Mall Gazette, has a melancholy interest when read by the light of recent events—the death of the author by his own hand, and the awful struggle in which his country is involved. Its theme is the future of France, and its chief object is to point out the danger to France with which such a struggle is fraught, be the issue what it may. The very opening words are words of warning: "La France approche de l'épreuve la plus redoutable qu'elle ait encore traversée." The worst of his fears is indeed, already realized; for the German unity which he dreaded as the result of a war with Prussia, no matter whether the victory rested with France or not, was accomplished at the stroke by the mere declaration of war by the Emperor. Suppose, he says, that victory remains with France—and the mere fact, he remarks, that there should be any question on this head shows the change of position effected since 1866; before that time the only question was whether France could hold her own against the coalition of all Europe—but grant that she has the victory, what will she do with it? Will she follow the example of Prussia, and, availing herself of the "principle of nationalities," strengthen herself by annexation? There are only two parts of Europe to which this principle could be applied by France—namely, Belgium and the French portions of Switzerland. But the price to be paid for this trifling gain would be, of necessity, the recognition of the principle of nationalities in other quarters. France could not then, with any show of consistency, object to the union of some fifty-one millions of German-speaking people in one State, or to the union of all the Slavonic races under the Russian flag. France, therefore, he thinks, must leave the principle of nationalities alone. By applying it she has little to gain, while her encouragement of it is certain to result in a vast increase of strength to her rivals, and a proportionate diminution of power to herself. If, on the other hand, she were to remain content with the mere rights of victory, she might indeed for a while retard German unity, but its ultimate accomplishment would be made more sure, as the movement in favor of it would be stimulated by defeat. Even victory, therefore, is pregnant with danger to the future of France. Suppose, however, Prussia, alone or aided by Russia, to be victorious. It is unnecessary to urge, he says, that this would be "the tomb of the greatness of France." France would not be annihilated, it is true. There is still in Europe a sufficiently strong feeling as to the necessity of a certain equilibrium to make the preservation of her existence desirable to the other Powers. But her place among the nations of Europe would be lost; Prussia and Russia would rise with her fall; German unity would be accomplished at one stroke; Austria sooner or later would fall to pieces, the German portions becoming the property of the new Germany, the Slavonic being appropriated by Russia; the Eastern question would be settled without any regard to the wishes of France; and England, "sufficiently rewarded for her complaisance by the tranquil possession of Egypt and the spectacle of our disaster," would probably not trouble her head about these new combinations and arrangements on the Continent. Such, in brief, is the gloomy view put out by PREVOST PARADOL in his New France, and we think it is worth studying, not as a probable forecast of the future of France or Europe, but rather as an illustration of the force of national character. It shows curiously how completely military predominance and national greatness have become convertible ideas even with the most large-minded French politicians. To us the greatness of France seems too solidly, too firmly established, to crumble away into nothing the moment she ceases to be the military dictatress of Europe.

THE FRIENDLESS NATION.

A Recent Article by E. About on the Situation of France.

M. EDMOND ABOUT, writing in Le Soir, says:

"Upon whom can we count? We have not an ally—not one; for what remains of that poor little Denmark so brutally dismembered only represents moral force, and it is not moral force we lack. Blackmailed, with whom we fought side by side in the Crimea and in China—England, whose interests, political and commercial, we have acted without thought of remuneration—prays for the success of our enemy. If it be true that the Times gives voice to the opinion of the city, and that the city traders, in their wealthy persons, are an epitome of all Great Britain, we Love only lies and treason to expect from the English people. It matters relatively little whether M. DE BISMARCK have or have not bought up the principal London papers; sincere or bribed, they declare open war upon us, and the hatred visibly sympathizes with them. Princes and rentiers in Berlin, Vienna, Pesth, Madrid, Turin, without perceiving, poor people! that such an event would bring about the abasement of all Europe, and their own. They swell out the victories of Prussia, they hide her defeats; they would like to see the Crown Prince in Paris; they grant Lorraine to the mad little friend of the composer WAGNER. They stimulate their cold hearts with all the generous blood our soldiers have shed upon the battle-field, and cast a thought neither toward Belgium nor Holland nor the Dutch colonies, nor to that rivalry of the seas which would avenge our defeat upon themselves if the fate of arms condemned us without appeal. The Belgians, calling themselves neutral, fight against us in all their journals. Poor sheep, rising against the watch-dog which preserved their freedom! Holland, which preserved their freedom! Holland, which would be but a mouthful for the mighty jaws of King WILLIAM, rejoices to see us bitten in the side, without perceiving that if we perish today she will be devoured to-morrow. The Emperor of Russia—there is not yet a Russian nation—compliments KING WILLIAM day by day. He bore us a grudge for Sebastopol, this magnanimous ALEXANDER. Much good may it do him! But understand then, most wretched Sire, that a great German Empire, founded in spite of us, in hostility to us, would eternally isolate Russia from Western Europe, and would more surely throw you back upon Asia than could all the victories of NAPOLEON I. Spain, which has caused us so much and so miserable interference, and the Kingdom of Italy, which owes us its existence, shut themselves up in a surly neutrality. These two peoples, our neighbors, our brothers by origin, our natural allies, which ought to tend, with us, toward the founding of a Latin confederation, discover that fall as to see France in her turn, from Pole to Pole, Spain! poor Italy! What would you be in Europe without us? Austria, whom we beat at Magenta and Solferino by force of arms, and at Sadowa by non-interference, thinks to take her revenge by leaving us alone before her enemy and ours. She has not enough, still more cowardly enough, even for a diversion which would make of us her grateful allies for the next century. She folds her arms. What can she hope? Would she wish to have in us companions of misfortune? I hope that this pitiful consolation will be refused her, and, come what will of us, I wrest from her the glory of being her companions in abasement. Some days after Sadowa, when the Emperor of Austria prepared to give desperate battle under the walls of Vienna, the traders of the capital came in deputation to say to him: "Go and fight elsewhere, if you are really determined to fight; spare us the horrors of a bombardment, which might damage our houses and turn our beer." Paris is getting ready to prove, by an heroic defense, her superiority over Vienna. We have not an ally in Europe—the fact is clear. Neither the Great Powers nor the little States will make common cause with France. The peoples themselves are willing in their cabinets for a decisive victory of the Prussian to beg pardon for us, and to limit, in the interests of the European equilibrium, the precipitate annexations of BISMARCK. Thanks, gentlemen, but France will save her soul all alone, and will owe the obligation to no one but herself. France is still strong enough to say with the Medea of CORNEILLE, "I alone, and it is enough!"

HISTORY OF THE WAR.

Prussian Review of the Campaign—From the Opening to the Occupation of Nancy and Lunneville.

The Berlin Staatsanzeiger gives the following review of the campaign from July 15 until the occupation of Nancy and Lunneville: "On the 15th of July the news of the demands made by France to King WILLIAM at Ems on the previous day spread through all parts of Germany. A cry of indignation in every district and among all parties responded to those monstrous demands. War, a frightful calamity, which had been regarded as averted, became inevitable, and the gauntlet thrown down was taken up. On the 15th of August, NAPOLEON's day, German flags and banners were waving beyond the French Moselle and Meurthe. Within a month Germany, summoned from the peaceful occupations of peace to the bloody conflict, has sent out above a million well-disciplined and well-armed warriors, brought up its hundreds from the Niemen to the Bodensee, formed powerful armies, shattered picked corps (African troops and those trained in the camp of Chalons) in bloody battles and fights, broken the heart of the Imperial army, which was compelled then to retreat from the frontier beyond the Moselle and the Meurthe. We are now, therefore, in a position to publish a review of the operations. As already mentioned, our army authorities preferred, when France in from hostilities, its fresh troops to the frontier, to carry out completely the difficult and complicated task of mobilization. The Ministerial order directed this to be done systematically, as it had been elaborated in the smallest and most intricate details after mature consideration at time of peace. This was accomplished, and with a speed and exactness, France, how far as has been already said, might in consequence have pushed her troops beyond the frontier, and lived at our expense, and this was attended with a yet greater evil. In view of the French corps, not destined to great operations, but ready for rapid movement, and railway transport could not be brought right up to the frontier, as the successively arriving divisions were in the highest degree endangered by the enemy's advance, and at best must have begun with retreating fights. It was proposed, therefore, so to bring back the focus point of the army of the Rhine, as that point could be reached by the advancing enemy, sufficient force would be assembled to oppose him with a prospect of success. Every hour, of course, altered the situation; every day was a gain. When the announcement came that the enemy was not precisely advancing, we could venture on a stage further the divisions which were immediately following. This difficult task of railway transport had been foreseen and carefully provided for, so that by dint of restless activity, after the issue of the order of mobilization, on the part of all concerned, a work hitherto incomparably unexampled was brilliantly in the way every check or backward movement was guarded against. The army collected at Treves, advanced to Mayence, and then by both sides of the Rhine to Mannheim; the heads pressed forward in proportion as the reinforcements arrived. As soon as the railway was established into activity, troops of separate corps, as their mobilization was completed, were conveyed on one line, and the corps arriving later were brought into the first line of those which were marching. This was being continued when the heads were already in collision with the enemy, so that it was almost impossible for the enemy to inform himself of the dispositions of our troops. We, on the contrary, had a perfectly satisfactory account of the French army, as their corps formed on the frontier, and there remained merely for us to learn what was the strength of the main force of the enemy developed itself opposite the Prussian Saar, while Marshal MCMAHON's corps was in some measure isolated in Alsace, and on the Upper Rhine a corps still in course of formation was projected. As long as the mustering up of the German Army was not completed, the authorities were obliged to keep on the defensive; but they by no means intended, notwithstanding the initiative of France in this respect, to remain waiting as soon as they were able to attack the enemy in his own territory. There could not be a more tempting invitation to an attack by part of our force than MCMAHON's proximity to the Crown Prince's army. The task of the latter during the period of defensive waiting had been to protect South Germany—a task which could not have been better fulfilled than by assuming the offensive on the left bank of the Rhine, and seeking the enemies, threatening South Germany on their own territory. The Crown Prince accordingly broke up his encampment, crossed the Lauter on the 4d of August, destroyed on the 4th DOUAY's division at Wissembourg, and on the 6th, in the bloody battle of Woerth, defeated MCMAHON's corps, though strengthened by troops from the south, in such a manner that with its enormous losses it was almost dissolved. By this splendid victory South Germany was freed from the threatened invasion, Alsace was conquered, the flank of the African troops was made harmless, and the difficult and easily-defended passes of the Vosges were opened to the advance of the German columns. On the same day a great and eventful victory was won on the Saar. It had not been the purpose of the authorities to offer battle here to the hostile main army until the moment collected at this point were disclosed, but a division which had advanced over the river came into collision with an apparently feeble force. The enemy supported his troops thus engaged, so that the struggle assumed larger dimensions; and on the Prussian side also all the troops in the neighborhood were brought up, partly by rail, in order to carry the fight, once begun, to a triumphant conclusion. The result was that twenty-six Prussian battalions succeeded in driving the entire Frossard corps, to whose assistance two other divisions of BAZAINE's marched up, out of a position till then thought almost impregnable. Both these victories were followed by extraordinary results and by great tactical and strategic consequences. The prestige of the French Army even in the eyes of the world was disrupted; two of its corps had been so shattered that their main army, which had threatened our frontier, became untenable. The operations of the enemy had so soon with that after two of his collected corps were beaten, the retreat of his collected forces beyond the Moselle and the Meurthe became imperative. The Prussian columns followed them without a halt up to the guns of Metz, and took possession of different passages over the Moselle and Meurthe; the important towns of Nancy, Lunneville and Pont-à-Mousson are in our hands, and a large tract of Eastern France is in our possession. The only important point in this territory which is still held by the French, Strasbourg, is surrounded by German troops, and half the journey to Paris lies behind us."

The Flight of McMahon's Army.

A correspondent of the Vienna Wehr Zeitung gives some most graphic pictures of the flight of MCMAHON's Army. He writes: "I could now (Aug. 6, 2½ P. M.) stay in Mangenau no longer. Despite the warning of my host, I turned out of the northern gate and took the direction of the Hagenau street toward Niedersbronn. The roar of cannon was loud. Columns of smoke rose in the north-west and even in the direction of Sulzburg. I judged the fight to be near Niedersbronn, and did not err. At 4 o'clock, in galloped a horse with empty saddle slipping under its belly, through the town gate. Directly after, a second, then a third; then followed a cuirassier, his horse covered with blood and foam, without helmet, without arms. Next an artillerist, on an unsaddled horse, his face distorted with inexpressible fright. Some minutes later, a mob of some twenty horsemen hurried past, among whom two Zouaves clinging upon one horse were conspicuous; the others were cuirassiers in every stage of fright and terror, some swinging wildly their sabres; others, as if out of their wits, flogging their poor exhausted horses, several of them without saddles, most of them without arms. One cuirassier bolted his horse just before me, and I recognized in the belowed, near his heavy sword, lastly his weighty breast-plate, and then laughing contemptibly, rode leisurely on. A pause of some five minutes followed. The townsmen had all fled inside the gates. The field watch and I stood alone at the point where the Niederbronn branch railway intersects the high road. Presently up gallops a field gendarme, halts his half-dead horse, and calls out: "Shut the gates! Instantly! The enemy! The Prussians! Say heck!" The field-watch turned white. I exclaimed, "What madness! Hagenau is an open town. There could be no defense, and if the Prussians really were there the best thing for the town was to open the gates as wide as possible." His fear brightened up. The tumult became greater. Among a crowd of cuirassiers some lancers were mixed up; then some hussar uniforms. The roads are thronged; unmounted horses gallop past as if driven on by panic; on all sides are swarms—artillerymen in shirt-sleeves, many of their horses with the traces cut, ridden by infantrymen; cuirassiers, or artillery, of which I have not remarked one officer. As the mob was thickest a railway train came screaming along from the north. At the moment a number of peasant girls, with their conveyances entangled in the throng, were close upon the rails. They cannot move forward or backward; they seem lost. The field-watch and myself seizing the barrier-tree, forced back the distracted wenches, thus the barrier, helped them over, and the train rushed past without mishap. The train ought to have saved the materiel accumulated at Niederbronn; it ought to have transported the wounded; it was entirely devoted to flight. They were the first infantry soldiers who saved themselves. All the wagons over-filled, on the roofs, hanging off by the handles, with half their bodies in the air, on the gangway boards, some fully accoutred, some half-naked, no wounded! So flashed past us this novel picture of retreat arousing the current of misfortune in the high road. We let the barrier balk drop, and sprung aside. Like a wild hunt the horsemen galloped into the town and clattered through it without drawing bridle. By 5 o'clock the torrent gradually ceased. After a pause came the convoyeurs. I counted four or five convoyeurs all completely harnessed, yet without their guns. Then jolted and rattled past a broken ammunition wagon crammed with Turcos; next a peasant's wagon filled with bedding and household gear, but no owner; a Zouave led the horses, two frightfully wounded Turcos lay on the bedding, on a mattress armed soldiers of all arms clung around it. Now followed infantry on foot. It was about 6½; still no officer. In dense swarms the chancery cars, the carriages of three general brigades, the archives of a division, four or five empty ammunition carts, every kind of ambulance conveyed, all jumbled with unmounted soldiers. On one car lay three corpses, a few pitifully-dressed Turcos following in the crowd in dumb resignation. Then came a lot of sutlers and camp-followers. The infantry had all flung away their packs, many their guns, some were in their shirt-sleeves, most of them had leaves stuck on their swords and swung on their shoulders. By far the greater part were these vieux soldats for whose sake Napoleon III. so lately vouched, I shall not soon forget a poor perspiring infantry soldier of the Fifteenth, smartly accoutred, with knapsack on his back, with bread, red face, who came up to me and anxiously asked where his regiment was. I told him to go right on to Strasbourg, and perhaps he would find it there. He marched bravely along as I bade, directed him. He was an Alsatian. About 9½ an orderly troop of cuirassiers, under command of a Captain and two subalterns, about forty men strong, rode past. They were almost all properly accoutred, and kept step. Between 4 and 5 o'clock a disorderly mobile horde, disarmed in the Vosges, came in their miserable existence; in the whole body not more than forty in marching order; altogether some 8,000 to 10,000 men; very few wounded, some three or four cavalry officers, two artillery and about eight infantry officers in the entire mass; such a rout as neither 1809 or 1866 ever witnessed. But look I musket in the ligenau. It was 7 o'clock; the stream of fugitives was less swollen. As in the fading twilight I hastened toward the town to learn if any trains were going, I came across five or six soldiers of various arms, leading in their midst one Prussian prisoner. I asked if they had got with them the entire Prussian Army, so far as they was trembling. In such a debâcle to parade one prisoner! The public-houses were a scene of animation. Soldiers were busy eating and drinking, and what surprised me they quietly paid their bills. In an upper room four infantry officers drank their evening in silence. Five cuirassiers sat before a roast goose, cracking bad jokes. Early next morning at 7 I was lucky enough to reach Strasbourg in a wagon."

Prussian Losses—Official But Incomplete Statements.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times, writing under date of Aug. 31, says: "At length the first official losses in the field have been made public. They only fulfil too completely the melancholy anticipations with which we saw the troops going out to the war. Although restricted to officers, and referring only to a few introductory engagements, they contain figures which will not easily be erased from the minds of men. I will just give you a few examples. As you may be aware, a Prussian regiment on a war footing has 3,000 men, with 60 officers. Of these 60 officers the Seventy-fourth Regiment (Hanoverians) lost no less than 30 in killed and wounded at Wissembourg. The Seventy-seventh (also Hanoverians) on the same day lost 20 officers; the Thirty-ninth, (Rhinelanders,) 16; the Eighty-second, (Hessians,) 19; the Ninety-fifth, (Thuringians,) 16; the Eighty-third, (Hessians,) 14; the Fifty-third, (Westphalians,) 11; the Eighty-ninth, (Nassauers,) 9; the Eighteenth, (Prussians,) 11. At Woerth, was it at Woerth, where the Prussians were for five hours engaged opposed to the French, who were stationed on the hills, and could not be dislodged until taken in flank by Wirtembergers and Bavarians. There the Fifty-eighth Regiment (Poseners) had 20 dead and wounded officers; the Fifty-ninth, (Poseners,) 20; the seventh, (King's Grenadiers, Lower Silesians and German Poseners,) 28; the Forty-seventh, (Lower Silesians,) 29; the Forty-sixth, (Lower Silesians,) 33; the Fifty-seventh (Lower Silesians,) 30; the Sixth, (Westphalians,) 29; the Thirty-seventh, (Westphalians,) 26, &c. What frightful conclusions may be derived from these statistics in respect of the higher grades as to the number of casualties among rank and file I need not say. But the most frightful carnage of all in the earlier part of the campaign was at Spicheren, whose steep and precipitous heights, defended by a terrible fire from cannon, mitrailleuses, and Chassepots, were stormed resultless in vain, and at last carried at the point of the bayonet. On this spot 18,000 Prussians, gradually increased to 37,000, struggled against 40,000 French. Though the official lists do not yet extend to this sanguinary encounter, there can be no doubt as to the correctness of the private intelligence forwarded me, which gives the total of the losses as 2,207, of whom 311 are dead and 1,466 wounded. Accordingly, every twelfth man was killed or wounded. Some regiments lost nearly one-half their men on the spot, as, for instance, the Fifth Company of the Forty-eighth, (Rhinelanders,) which went with 250 men into the fire and came out with 120, and the first company of the Eighth, (King's Own—Brandenburgers,) which on the evening of the battle numbered 187, remained either to the grave or the hospital. Passing on to the tremendous three days' battle near Metz, we have not private intelligence, and this only referring to individual detachments; yet we know already enough to imagine the rest. On the 14th, in the battle named after Pange, or Courcelles, the Forty-eighth (Rhinelanders) lost 38 officers and sol. rank and file; in other words, about one-third its complement. A rifle battalion in the same locality was by the enemy's fire deprived of nine of its officers and 270 rank and file—i. e., of a third of the officers and a fourth of the men. On the 16th, as well as on the 18th—the latter being the battle of Mars-la-Tour, or Vionville—the losses of the Prussians were comparatively greater than those of the French, the former being on both occasions greatly outnumbered, yet holding fast the enemy with a bull-dog's tenacity, to give their main force time to come up and engage him in right earnest. At Mars-la-Tour we lost 1,600 of the country was spilled water. Within a few moments, by the unexpected unsaddling of a mitrailleuse battery, Generals Stülpnagel, Count Waldersee, Count Kleist, Henry VII., Prince of Reuss, Baron Grimm, Baron Wittleben and many other noblemen of high rank and position were killed. The grand duke at Beconville, on Gravelotte, on the left, where the Prussian hosts of half a million strength are said to have suffered a loss of 15,000 combatants, was worthy of the 8th Corps. Nor did the French suffer less. In the three actions near Metz they had nearly 15,000 dead, and 40,000 dead, wounded, and prisoners together.

AFRICAN EXPLORATION.

Sir Samuel Baker's Expedition—Letters and Reports from the Explorer.

Sir RODERICK MURCHISON writes to say that he has received a long letter from Sir SAMUEL BAKER, dated the 15th of June, at Towkreya, on the banks of the White Nile, in lat. 9 to 11. He has there established a station in the shilluck country, in which he will pass the rainy season, and has erected magazines of galvanized iron to protect his provisions and materials. His flotilla of fifty-three vessels is moored along the wharf; the troops and Europeans were comfortably housed, and in good health. Sir SAMUEL has been joined by all the branches of the expedition, viz Khartoum, Mr. HIGGINBOTTOM, his chief engineer, having conveyed the vessels and stores across the Nubian desert, on the backs of more than 1,800 camels. But the delay caused by the obstruction of all conveyance during the opening of the Suez Canal, and the absence of all preparations at Khartoum, which Sir SAMUEL had directed to be ready, caused the loss of the favorable season for the voyage up the White Nile, the course of which, since 1862, has become obstructed by a great dam, composed of masses of marsh vegetation floated downward, beneath open patches of the surface. The slave traders having been thus prevented from following the usual route to their old haunts, had discovered a passage to Gondokoro by way of the Bahr Giraffe, which has then proved to be not a tributary, but an arm of the main river. Up this arm Sir SAMUEL attempted to proceed, but was forced to return. His camp, on the banks of the main river, being established, Sir SAMUEL will employ his 1,800 men to saw and scap cers for the advance to Gondokoro, in November next. At the station he has stopped a boat laden with 130 slaves, who, he says, were packed as close as sardines in a cask. Including another lot which he had liberated, he had already freed 300 of these miserable creatures, mostly women, young girls and young boys. The latter he has placed in charge of the first labors of his English blacksmiths was to cut through the chains which bound these unfortunates together, all of whom, on obtaining their freedom, were duly registered. Sir SAMUEL adds that Lady BAKER and himself have been well from the beginning; that his nephew, Lieut. BAKER, R. N., has been slightly ill, but able, and that his six English mechanics had proved efficient and well conducted.

NOTES.

The Times of India reports that the Portuguese expedition for the reconquest of Zambesi from the rebel chief BONGA has been defeated and forced to retreat, leaving its stores behind.

The Times is requested to contradict the report of the arrival in England of Mme. la Maréchale DE CARROBERT. Her Excellency is, we are informed, in Paris, and will remain there under all circumstances.

The Times has authority to state that there has been no correspondence between the Emperor of the French and Her Majesty on the subject of mediation. There is also no truth in the report of the Cawnpore having expressed an opinion as to the terms of peace. The phrase attributed to Mr. GLADSTONE by a German newspaper, that we must take care that the conqueror does not get too strong," was never uttered by Mr. GLADSTONE.

At the assize for the Seine, TASSUS and Baron DE LA PAGERIE, one who robbed Messrs. ROTHSCHILD of 1,600,000 francs, had been found guilty, but with extenuating circumstances, and each had been sentenced to five years' imprisonment. It will be remembered that BECKERS, who was a trusted steward of Messrs. ROTHSCHILD, falsified the books in order to conceal his defalcations.

A writer in the Times says it is reported that when the author of the "Wacht am Rhein," CARL WECKERLIN, first heard his composition sung by the multitude, he was out of his mind. He is now well, and Queen AUGUSTA sent him a gold medal, with an autograph letter. He is in indifferent circumstances, and a more substantial mark of the public appreciation is being made in a subscription, which has quickly reached a good sum, and is still increasing.

The British Medical Journal regrets to learn that the health of Queen VICTORIA is failing. The cares and labors incident to her exalted position are at present increased by personal anxiety for the safety of many nearly related to Her Majesty; the Prince Consort's only brother and the husbands of two of the Queen's daughters are in the German Army, at the seat of war. These causes combine to inflict suffering on a nervous system at all times most sensitive to worry and anxiety. Travelling under arrangements as private as possible, and free from the physical fatigue of a journey to Scotland is trifling, while the benefits Her Majesty experiences from the cool bracing air and quiet of her Highland home is always great and decided.

Philology has lost another of its leaders. Dr. REINHOLD KLOTZ. Born in 1807, he was attached to the University of Leipzic, ever since 1841, as Professor of Classical Philosophy, and after the death of GOTTFRIED HERMANN, director of the Philological Seminary. The numerous editions of classical writers are justly famous, but he has also done his small service to science by the "Jahrbücher fur Philologie und Pädagogik," which he founded, together with J. C. JAHN, in 1831.

Gen. TURR has communicated to a correspondent of the Standard, upon whom that journal places implicit reliance, the following particulars of a conversation he held with the Emperor of the French at the Tuileries on the 22d of July, 1870. War was then declared, and the General observed that the declaration had fallen among them (noes) like a shell. The Emperor, he states, replied: "I had not an idea of making war at present, but since the occasion has come I accept it with a good heart. Sooner or later, if the Prussian efforts continue to mine, Paris, Florence and Vienna, and the disconnecting process makes vast strides. The point of the sword is not directed against me alone, and if the other European Powers do not see it, so much the worse for them. I see European danger, and do not mean to be left alone. If France is left without support—well! it is not the first time that France has fought to save Europe."

The Paris correspondent of a contemporary writes: "There is now no doubt that three very great ladies—Mme. DE POURTALES, Mme. DE RAINEQUE, and the Duchess FASCHINE DE LA PAGERIE—have been arrested as Prussian spies. The first two are in Vincennes, and everybody says they will be shot as soon as possible. There is no exception for the fair sex. I hear, but am not quite sure, that the Empress has interfered to get the Duchess TASCHER DE LA PAGERIE out of harm's way. There is a ferocious appetite for blood just now, which would rejoice greatly at the military execution of some ladies who, but yesterday were the most brilliant ornaments of the Court of the Tuileries." The Gaulois evidently alludes to this subject in these terms: "Last night (Aug. 26) the door-keeper at the fort of Vincennes was sent away from his post, so that he might not see a person who was conveyed to the fort, and who is now a captive in it." The Patrie denies the truth of the report.

The following anecdote of Gen. TROCHU may be read with interest, as a time when he is called upon to play an important part in public affairs, as it shows that he is not less distinguished for his private virtues than for his talents and courage as a soldier. Upon the death of his father, Trochu, as the heir-at-law, under the French law of succession, to a moiety of the small patrimonial estate in Brittany, which was to be divided between himself and his brother. This brother had eleven children. The General has none. He simply remarked that his brother had left the property more than he had, and relinquished his share of it. Not long afterward his brother likewise died. Upon this occurrence the General observed that, having no family of his own, he was the better able to provide for that which Providence had bestowed upon him. He adopted his eleven nephews and nieces, laid down his carriage, reduced his own domestic expenditure, and assumed with cheerfulness the duty of providing for the whole of his late brother's family and household.

The Figaro publishes the following extract from a letter of the Prince TANI, addressed from Twickenham on the 20th August, to a friend in Paris: "What events within three days! What rude shocks for every French heart! You will well understand how much we suffer in the presence of this national disaster, when, to aggravate our distress, we are compelled to be passive spectators. The refusal of the services made by my uncle and my brother is, in this respect, cruel. That refusal has prevented me sending to been placed before us which completely exculpates Mr. MANARA from the serious charge, and the officers representing the Government affirm that they have no proofs of any kind whatever against him. It is but fair that an honorable gentleman whose reputation has been thus seriously compromised, should be vindicated with a completeness of publicity not inferior to that given to the original charge.

SIXTEENTH WARD TRAGEDY.

First Day of the Inquest—Testimony of Ann Boden, Catharine Barclay, Officer Gick, Robert McNeilly, Horace Roberts and John Barry—The Prisoner Remanded to the Tombs.

An inquest was held at the Coroner's office, City Hall, yesterday, by Coroner SCHIRMER, to investigate the circumstances attending the death of BERNARD RODEN, of No. 226 West Seventeenth-street, which took place on Sunday last. A large number of persons were present, and the prisoner, Mrs. ANN MCEVOY, with her child, attended also. She is a small, quiet-looking woman.

The first witness, ANN RODEN, being duly sworn, said: I reside at No. 226 West Seventeenth-street in the rear; am the wife of the deceased; on Sunday, Sept. 4, about three P. M., Mrs. ANN MCEVOY, who resides next door, and is a "Connaught woman," had been threatening to kill all the "Far Downs;" she came to my room and struck me on the head and hands with a stick; we had quarreled during the fore part of the day; she began it; my husband, the deceased, who was lying in bed when she assaulted me, got up and followed Mrs. MCEVOY into her room; a few minutes after he came out bleeding from a cut on the left arm, and as he bled profusely, I tied a handkerchief around his arm; he as well as myself were under the influence of liquor; I did not see Mrs. MCEVOY injure my husband; I ran for a doctor on Ninth-avenue immediately, and when I returned Mrs. TILFORD was trying to stop the hemorrhage without success; the officers then took him to the Sixteenth Precinct Station-house; my husband did not tell me how he was hurt.

MARY ANN TILFORD corroborated this testimony, adding that she saw nothing of the quarrel, although she heard the subsequent words made by the parties engaged.

CATHARINE BARCLAY was next called and testified: I keep a store at No. 226 West Seventeenth-street, and was called out by a little boy about three o'clock on Sunday afternoon to see two women scolding and the killing each other in the yard; I went to see what the matter was, and saw Mrs. MCEVOY with a stick in her hand, which I took from her; she got possession of it after; I went back to the store; in a few minutes I heard that a man was bleeding to death; I went to his room and saw deceased lying on the bed bleeding from a wound in the arm; I cannot say how he received it.

Officer GEORGE GICK, of the Sixteenth Precinct, being put on the stand, said: I was on post in West Seventeenth-street, on Sunday, and hearing that a fatally wounded man, at No. 226, went to the house; on entering, Mrs. MULLIN pointed to Mrs. MCEVOY saying, "She is the person who did it; arrest her; we can swear she did it;" I demanded admission to the accused's room, but was denied; the top part of the door was glass, and had been broken; Mrs. MCEVOY said, by the deceased, who threatened his arm through and cut himself so doing; she denied having struck the prisoner with anything but a stick; I went into deceased's room; found him insensible, and on Mrs. MULLEN's again accusing Mrs. MCEVOY with having cut him, I returned and opened her door, and took her to the Station-house, thence to the Court, where she was committed by Justice SCHANDLEY to await the action of the Coroner; I found an ax in the alley-way, between Mrs. MCEVOY's and ROBERTS' doors, after returning from Station-house; all the women were intoxicated, and when I questioned Mrs. MULLIN about the matter, she denied any knowledge of the circumstances attending it.

ROBERT MCNEILLY, M. D., being next sworn, said: I was called to the Sixteenth Precinct Station-house at seven o'clock on Sunday evening; on my arrival I found deceased in a state of syncope; I examined the pulsation at the radial and temporal arteries and found them pulseless; on his left fore-arm was an extensive lacerated and contused wound of the superficial layer of the muscles; a portion of the tendons being severed; he died five minutes after; in my opinion I do not think it possible to produce such a wound by breaking through a pane of glass; it must have been done by some blunt cutting instrument, such as an ax.

Sergt. HORACE ROBERTS, of the Sixteenth Precinct, who searched the house after the arrest, said he found no traces of blood in Mrs. MCEVOY's room, except on the glass door; there was a large pool as deceased's room door.

JOHN BARRY, the next witness, stated that he had been present when the women were quarreling; Mrs. RODEN was calling Mrs. MCEVOY hard names, for which she got a stick to beat her; Mrs. RODEN then went into her room; and her husband followed Mrs. MCEVOY, who went into her room and locked the door; deceased took hold of the knob with his right hand, and thrust his left through a pane of glass in it; when he withdrew it his hand was bleeding profusely, and he walked back to his room; I never entered the room of Mrs. MCEVOY; I saw no ax in her room, but observed no ax or any other sharp instrument there.

ANN MULLEN was called, but nothing was elicited from her, as she had not witnessed the affair at all.

The next witness sworn was Wm. MCNALLY, whose subpœna being examined by the Coroner, he pronounced it done without authority, inasmuch as it had been filled in by STEER, the lawyer for the defense. Here, then, the Coroner adjourned the further hearing in the case until Friday next, and the prisoner was remanded to the Tombs. Subsequently Officer McNAMARA, sister of the accused, applied to the Coroner, requesting him to compel STEER to refund $10, which she said he had obtained from her under pretense of serving a subpœna. He told her to apply to a Police Magistrate.

Crimes and Casualties.

MICHAEL GRUBB and EDWARD MONTGOMERY, carpenters, were injured, yesterday, by the fall of the second and third floors of an old frame house, in Eleventh-avenue, near Thirty-sixth-street, which was being raised and repaired. The casualty was the result of the carelessness of a workman, who removed one of the braces supporting the second floor.

DAVID JONES, aged fifteen years, of No. 42 Ludlow-street, yesterday, fell through the hatchway of No. 2 Canal-street, from the second to the first floor, and had both arms broken. He was taken to the Park Hospital.

JAMES COFFER, thirty-five years of age, of No. 65 Mulberry-street, yesterday, attempted to commit suicide by taking sugar of lead. The dose was not fatal, and he was removed to the Park Hospital.

JAMES ROTH, aged twelve years, was run over, yesterday, in Eleventh-avenue, near Forty-first-street, by a truck, and his right leg severely injured. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

On Monday evening, JOHN D. BALDWIN, of No. 264 Delaplain-street, Brooklyn, entered the saloon No. 199 Bowery, and was robbed of a gold watch and some diamond studs worth $162. The accused were arraigned on the charge at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, before Judge LEDWITH, and held for trial.

JAMES HOWE, a young man of eighteen years old, was committed for trial at the Essex Market Police Court, before Judge LEDWITH, on a charge of attempting to stab an unknown man on the Bowery on the previous evening.

MARY ALLEN, who was but recently discharged from the Tombs, was committed for bail in $500, at the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday, for disorderly conduct in the house of his mother-in-law, Mrs. SARAH J. ALLEN, in Mercer-place, on Monday last.

JULIUS STEINWEHER, No. 51 Chambers-street, who was charged with presenting old lager beer stamps, was discharged in the United States Court, yesterday, the evidence adduced being insufficient to establish the charge against him.

JAMES MULDOON was convicted in the United States Court, yesterday, before Commissioner OSBORNE, on a charge of twice drawing, without due authority, $100 bounty money, which was due his son.

CHARLES QUINN and PETER MCCORMACK were detected breaking into the premises of ELLIOTT P. GLEASON, No. 136 Mercer-street, on Monday night, and were committed at the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, before Judge BRANDY.

At the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, a colored man named JAMES BAKER was held for trial for stealing a watch and ring worth $90, the property of DANIEL CHARTER, No. 17 Waite-street.

The Horse Market.

It is now several weeks since our last report of the state of trade in the horse market at Twenty-fourth-street, in this City. During the hot Summer months trade has been dull even in the establishments of the first-class dealers, and quite slow in the collar stables. There are good prospects, however, for the coming Fall, and already some sales have been effected. We quote them as follows:

M. S. CURRY, dealer in first-class carriage, phaeton and saddle horses, reports trade good. He sold to Mr. MCCready, yesterday, one double team of trotting-horses for $3,000; other teams, single and double, at from $600 to $2,500; has on sale a four-in-hand team of dark dapple grays, whole manes, 16 hands high, leaders 16½ hands high; 8 pairs matched; 5 single horses, including saddle-horses. Messrs. COMAN and FITCH report trade slow but looking up; no sales yet in heavy handsome harness-horses. The have lately sold several pairs of light harness horses; also several single teams at prices ranging from $300 to $2,500; have on sale 18 head of choice1 animals. E. A. FITCH, who is on the road with twenty head of fresh horses, will arrive in ten days. C. F. HILL, dealer in trotting horses, has on hand six head of speedy trotters, time 2:40; range of prices for same class sold during past twelve days, $600 to $1,500. He sold yesterday one trotter at $1,500. At the Bull's Head stables, A. S. CHAMBERLIN, proprietor, trade in heavy draught horses is quiet and likely to improve; on sale 200 head of Canada and Western horses, at prices ranging from $150 to $300 per head. Good stepping Canada horses fetch from $300 to $500, and are in demand. Even these heavy horses sell according to speed. Fresh horses arrive daily from the country, where they are numerous.

SELLING COUNTERFEIT MONEY.

Another Swindle Unveiled—Skillful Evasion of the Law—Abortive Efforts to Catch the Criminal—The Wrong Parties Arrested.

Another fraud of an extensive nature has just been developed, but unfortunately for the public good the guilty actors in the matter have had their plans so skillfully constructed that the attempt to bring them to justice has proved a miserable failure. It appears that about a week since a communication was received at the office of United States Commissioner SHIELDS, directing attention to circulars which were issued from the premises No. 62 John-street, offering for sale large quantities of counterfeit currency at a small premium, and inclosing a copy of the circulars, containing instructions for the proper transaction of the business. This circular stated that no sale would be effected until the money was first received at the office; in order to prevent the possibility of detection, and that, as far as the principals were concerned, the business was to be conducted as secretly as possible. The first action of the Commissioner was to place himself in correspondence with those who had been implicated in the fraud, and he then ascertained that in every instance, when the money was sent to No. 62 John-street, no answer was ever received; the counterfeit money was not obtained, and it being very apparent that they were the victims of a swindle, it became a matter of self-interest not to make any disclosures. Commissioner SHIELDS, however, determined to secure, immediately, sent for $40 worth of the "queer," and waited until Monday without getting an answer, when he issued a warrant for the arrest of the parties carrying on the business, and the seizure of the plates used for counterfeiting. Walk the Commissioner's warrant was awaiting execution in Government hands, he conversed in Officer BRADLEY of the Fifteenth Precinct, by a relative, that he had been duped, as already related, by the residents of No. 62 John-street, and BRADLEY, imagining that he had alighted on a nest of counterfeiters, with the assurance of promotion that flashed before his mind, obtained an order for the arrest of the criminals, and instantly proceeded to secure them. He arrived at the place on Monday afternoon, and, going up to the first floor, discovered that the rooms were locked. He knocked forcibly at the door of the office of a respectable engraver named G. G. WERTS, and announcing himself an officer, demanded immediate admission. Astonished at the nature of the demand and terrified at the fierce with which it was given, Mr. WERTS threw his head through the window and asked what was the cause of such severe conduct. The reply was no less peremptory than the question, and being accompanied with the threat of summary punishment with a pistol, which was presented at his head, Mr. WERTS was induced to open the door. The officer entered, arrested Mr. WERTS, Mr. DE ANAIME, J. HAY, G. GRAM and a lady friend, who were with him in the room, on a charge of counterfeiting, and seized all the plates in the office, used for printing purposes, believing they were employed for the manufacture of counterfeit money. Despite all remonstrances, the prisoners were taken to the station, and kept in custody until yesterday, when they were brought before Commissioner SHIELDS. Upon a statement of the facts of the case, they were immediately discharged, and the policemen reprimanded for his inconsiderate act of the morning. The most singular feature in the affair is that the real culprit, a man named ALLISON, who occupied an office down stairs, escaped even arrest, though it is certain he could not be punished, for want of satisfactory evidence to sustain an indictment.

PRACTICE—IS AN ORDER OF REFERENCE PROPER TO ASCERTAIN DAMAGES IN AN ACTION ON BOND, NO ANSWER BEING SERVED.

Ann Hall vs. John Emons, Jr., et al.—A suit was brought against James L. Paine, one of the defendants, by the plaintiff, and an order of arrest granted by Judge Jones. The defendants, thereupon, entered into a recognizance for $1,000 that Paine would hold himself ready to respond in person to any judgment which might be obtained against him. Judgment was obtained, and execution issued against Paine's property, and returned unsatisfied. Execution was then issued against the body of Paine, and return being made that he could not be found, an action was commenced against the defendants to recover on their bond. This action was commenced without the service of complaint, and, after notice of appearance on the part of defendants, plaintiff allowed fourteen of the twenty days allowed by statute to expire before serving a copy of the complaint. Two days after the service of such complaint, the defendants, without serving an answer, surrendered the judgment debtor to the custody of the Sheriff. Plaintiff, disregarding the surrender of the judgment debtor, gave notice that they would take judgment in default of an answer. On this motion the cause was sent before a referee to assess the amount of damages. This referee rendered his report in favor of the plaintiff, which report was confirmed by Judge McCunn. From this order confirming the referee's report and ordering judgment for plaintiff, appeal was taken to the Court at General Term, where the appeal was dismissed on the ground that, as order giving judgment in default of an answer was not an appealable order. A motion is now made not only to set aside the order of reference for want of jurisdiction, this not being a cause involving a long account, and the subsequent confirmation of the referee's report on notice, and the decision of the Court on appeal. The case has been fought with great persistency, the being the fifteenth motion of one kind or another which the Court has been called upon to determine. The motion was denied, with leave to renew within ten days on payment of $10 costs.

For motion, A. H. Beary, Stephen A. Walker opposing.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—SEPT. 6.

Before Judge Joseph F. Daly.

PRACTICE—APPEAL.

Dannenbaum vs. Silberman.—This was a motion to direct a stay of proceedings pending the service of a case on appeal, a former appeal having been dismissed for want of service of case.

In denying the motion Judge DALY says: "No party can prosecute more than one valid appeal from a judgment against him. The cause cited by plaintiff, Molony vs. Campbell, 28 Barb. and Comstock, 302, permitting a new appeal to be taken, was based on the fact that the first judgments were nullities, and the appellant might, if in time, take a new appeal. But in this case the appeal taken by the plaintiff, and which was dismissed for want of service of case, was a perfectly valid appeal, and he cannot prosecute another. The fact that the notice of entry of judgment served on him was a nullity did not affect the validity of his proceedings on appeal. He seems to have taken the ground that the judgment was inoperational, and proceeded, as he had the right to do, in his appeal. He cannot now be placed in the position that his proceedings were irregular, when they were manifestly regular."

TUESDAY, Sept. 6—P. M.

The Custom-house returns of the Foreign Trade of New-York for the month of July have just been rendered. The figures are given below, together with a summary of the Foreign Trade at this port for the seven months of the Calendar Year 1870, in comparison with the corresponding months of 1869:

The Import entries in July, 1870, at New-York, compare as follows with the corresponding month of the previous year, viz.:

	July, 1870.	July, 1869.
Dutiable Goods, direct	$12,576,722	$12,560,223
Dutiable Goods, warehoused	40,626,000	34,000,000
Free Goods	188,444	1,314,427
Total July entries	$54,429,216	$47,874,650

There was also entered, during the month, Foreign Specie to the value of $194,000, against $202,487 in the same month last year.

The value of Foreign Merchandise of the previous importation withdrawn from bond is $8,462,888, or $1,578,195 less than went into bond during the month; so that the amount of Merchandise actually marketed during the month, dutiable and free, is $23,063,039, on which the Gold Customs collected amount to $10,598,841, being at an average rate of duty on all the marketed Imports (including free articles) of 47 ⅌ cent. The amount marketed in July, 1869, was $21,926,928, and the Customs collected $10,045,078.

The comparative value of Foreign Goods entered at the Port of New-York, and of Foreign Goods actually marketed here in the seven months of 1869 and 1870, were as follows:

	1870. Jan. 1 to July 31.	1869. Jan. 1 to July 31.
Total entries	$170,826,193	$156,115,402
Total marketed	$156,264,167	$155,241,472
Customs thereon	78,157,462	78,612,420
Average tariff	46 ⅌ ct.	45.16 ⅌ ct.

*Of which Free Goods in 1870, $7,420,160, and Free Goods in 1869, $3,088,962.

In addition to the above the entries of Foreign Specie for the seven months were $7,857,948 against $10,612,947 for the corresponding period in 1869.

The actual monthly consumption (or values marketed) of Foreign Merchandise at New-York for the seven months of 1870 and 1869, compare as follows:

	1870. Jan. 1 to July 31.	1869. Jan. 1 to July 31.
January	$22,542,000	$22,542,522
February	22,479,000	22,479,000
March	22,412,000	22,412,000
April	22,345,000	22,345,000
May	22,282,000	22,282,000
June	22,220,000	22,220,000
July	22,158,000	22,158,000
Total seven months	$156,264,167	$155,241,472

The monthly Customs at this port received on Foreign (dutiable) Merchandise marketed were as follows:

January	$9,040,700	May	$11,672,412
February	10,000,000	June	11,000,000
March	11,577,822	July	10,598,841
April	10,700,000

Total New-York dutiable collected	$79,174,822
Miscellaneous out-port Customs	1,982,640
Total exported at New-York	$80,957,462

The Export clearances to foreign ports from New-York for the month of July were:

	July, 1870.	July, 1869.
Domestic produce	$21,846,427	$18,540,229
Foreign re-exported	2,582,797	2,333,771
Gold and silver	14,022,651	6,671,594
Total July clearances	$38,450,874	$26,545,594

The Exports of all descriptions from this port for Seven months of the calendar years 1870 and 1869, respectively, were as follows:

	1870. Jan. 1 to July 31.	1869. Jan. 1 to July 31.
Domestic produce	$205,155,191	$189,270,000
Foreign re-exported	18,852,107	4,111,857
Gold and silver	22,722,051	21,666,317
Total seven months	$246,771,349	$215,050,216

There was further information from Paris in the private telegrams this morning, as well as from the movements of the German armies, that the great battles of the War are over. It seems doubtful, indeed, whether there will be any further conflict of arms between Germany and France, notwithstanding the rapid approach of the King's invincible columns to Paris. The expectation is that there is enough practical sense in the Provisional Government at Paris to make peace upon terms which will be acceptable to Germany without being oppressive or humiliating to France. This being done, the civilized world can afford to leave the question of the endurance or stability of the so-called French Republic, improvised yesterday, to be settled, as all other sudden and intensely-impulsive revolutions for the last eighty years, in the same quarter, have been determined by time or blood-letting in Paris. Our private information, today, is that the Provisional Directory really look to no other result than peace without more fighting. The revolution, says one dispatch, has been accomplished, but the "situation" is awful. To talk of dying in the last ditch or to the last man, while "the Prussians are on French soil," is simply frenzy.

The early sales of Gold were influenced by telegrams from Frankfort and London quoting 5-20s lower, and also reflecting some concern as to the effect of the French revolution upon Italy and Spain. The first figures were 115½@115¾ ⅌ cent. Then came Paris telegrams, which influenced a reaction to 114¾@114½ ⅌ cent. The subsequent sales were 114½@114¾@115@114¾@114½ ⅌ cent. At 4 o'clock the quotation was almost identical with our last quotation of yesterday, 114½ ⅌ cent. We hear of no important export engagements for Wednesday's steamers. To-morrow, the Treasury Office will sell $1,000,000 Gold, and on Thursday, buy $2,000,000 United States 5-20s for Sinking Fund account. The Foreign Exchanges have all rallied firm at 109¾@109¾ ⅌ cent. for sixty days, London, and 110¾@110¾ for short sight. Moneys in good request from the Brokers at 5 ⅌ cent., on call loan, but where balances are voluntarily tendered by lenders, 3 ⅌ cent. is still accepted. We remark that implicit confidence is not felt in the Street in the long continuance of easy Money, though no higher rate than 7 ⅌ cent. on call loan is anticipated.

On the Stock Exchange the Public Funds were dullish through the forenoon, and heavily steady at the close of the day. The leading Domestic dealers, as observed last week, seem indifferent to a rise, and are thus considered practically bearish on the market, while the Foreign orders, on the decline in 5-20s in London and Frankfort this morning, are limited below the going rates. The general range of prices is ⅛@¼ ⅌ cent. below the closing figures of Monday. In the State Bonds there is a steady feeling as to prices, but not much business done today. The railway market was duller than yesterday through the greater part of the dealings, and the revival of activity noticed at the close of last week scarcely holds good, although late this Afternoon the feeling improved on the New-York and Western Bonds, and the market left off firm.

After the late Boards there was a weaker feeling in Gold, and better prices in most of the Railway Stocks. The following quotations were made as compared with Monday night:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

A St. Ménehould dispatch of the 5th says the transportation of the French prisoners to Germany has begun, and the advance on Paris continues. A London dispatch says the Bavarian corps is escorting the French prisoners, numbering 90,000. The Prefect of Malhouse telegraphs that the Germans are at several points in the neighborhood, and volunteers are hurrying to oppose them. A London dispatch of the 6th at noon, says Marshal MCMAHON died at Namur, in Belgium. The death of Gen. DE FAILLY is now denied. JULES FAVRE, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, has, it is asserted, made overtures of peace, based on the withdrawal of the Germans, and a guarantee that the standing army of France shall be abolished. M. GUIZOT has written a long letter to an English friend, in which he says France is the superior of Prussia in men, money and territory, and her equal in perseverance; the age is with France, and France is true to it.

The session of the Corps Legislatif of Saturday night was interrupted by a recess after the partial announcement of the disasters to the army by the Minister of War, and when the Body reassembled at 1½ A. M. Sunday, the Minister informed the Chamber of the surrender of the army at Sedan and of the Emperor. He then asked an adjournment. M. JULES FAVRE, however, offered resolutions that "LOUIS NAPOLEON BONAPARTE and his dynasty be declared to have forfeited the powers which the nation conferred upon them," that an Executive Committee of members be invested with powers necessary to repel invasion, and that Gen. TROCHU be charged exclusively with the defense of the capital. A member said they had not the power to declare the forfeiture, and the President again urged the adjournment of the sitting until noon, when the Chamber agreed to it. The meeting of Sunday afternoon, after debate, dissolved, the majority withdrawing, when the minority adopted the revolutionary measures.

The departure of the Ex-Empress from the Tuileries was evidently hurried. It occurred on Sunday afternoon, and by the entrance on the quay, leaving trunks piled about in various places, with bandboxes and articles of wearing apparel lying about in great confusion. It is said that all the attendants whom she had favored in prosperous times deserted her, not one remaining to see her off. The Emperor's room and that of the Prince presented similar scenes of confusion. The Paris papers say the Princess CLOTHILDE was the last member of the Ex-Imperial family to leave the palace. She left for Switzerland. It is stated that before the departure of the Empress a relative advised her to sign an abdication, which seemed agreeable to her, and she went to a council of Ministers with this object, but they opposed it. She was to sail from Ostend for England with her son. The Emperor continues his progress through Belgium, where great curiosity was manifested by the people to see him. Princess MATHILDE was arrested in Normandy, on Monday, with sixty-two trunks. She was conducted to Dieppe.

Orders have been given by the new administration in Paris to watch the late Superintendent of the Museum of the Louvre until the pictures stolen during his administration are produced; also to arrest the late Prefect of Police, who is suspected of a design to oppose the authorities; and to place seals on the cabinet of Marshal VAILLANT, Minister of the Imperial Household. The Marshal and his secretary left Paris on Monday night. Among the acts of the new Government are the revocation of the credentials of the Marquis DE LAVALETTE, Ambassador to London; Count DE MAUBOURG, Ambassador to Vienna; and Gen. FLEURY, Ambassador to St. Petersburg. The Austrian Government directed its representative in Paris to continue his relations with the Government de facto. The new Prefect of Police has issued a proclamation setting forth the facts of the revolution, and inviting the people of Paris to the "exercise of those political rights which they have just reconquered to the fullest extent possible, consistent with wisdom and moderation." The International Society of Paris has issued an address to the "Social Democracy" of Germany, imploring the Prussians to recross the Rhine, and urging the "Democracy" to clasp hands, forgive the crimes perpetrated by despots, and to form the "United States of Europe." VICTOR HUGO received an ovation on his return to Paris. He exhorts the people to keep calm and offer a determined resistance to the enemy.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The Convention of Roman Catholic Professors at Nuremberg demand a new Council to revise the proceedings of the late Council at the Vatican....It is reported that the Italian troops have entered Rome....The Carlists are said still to have considerable strength in the Basque provinces of Spain. Several bands have been attacked and dispersed by the troops....Gen. PRIM is violently attacked by the Unionists, who say that the greatest service he can render is to resign....It is stated in England that the British and French Governments, as soon as the latter is settled, will declare war upon China, in order to obtain satisfaction for the massacres at Tien-tsin.

GENERAL.

A writ of habeas corpus has been granted in the case of BERGAN, the Lieutenant of Col. KIRK, of North Carolina, who has been confined in jail by order of Judge BROOKS. It is returnable before Judge BOSS, of the United States Circuit Court, today.

The fifth annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association commenced at Poughkeepsie, yesterday. Delegates were present from all parts of the country. The session will continue three days, during which a great variety of questions will be discussed.

The State Convention of War Veterans met at Saratoga, yesterday, and passed a long list of resolutions, indorsing Gen. GRANT's Administration, expressing sympathy for the Germans in the present war, and for the Cubans in their struggle, and urging integrity, union, and harmony in the councils of the Republican Party.

The Georgia House of Representatives has passed a bill authorizing the issue of seven per cent. bonds to meet the outstanding bonds and interest due before January, 1872.

A fire broke out in the planing-mill of SMITH & HARSH, in Philadelphia, last evening, and spread to several lumber-yards in the neighborhood. The loss is known to exceed $200,000, but at a late hour last night the fire was still raging.

The muster of the Massachusetts militia commenced yesterday at Concord, under the command of Gen. BUTLER, and is to continue five days.

The steam-yacht Alice Rose, belonging to A. C. ALVORD, of this City, went ashore on Cotton's Beach, while going from the Isle of Shoals to Boston, on Sunday, and is a total wreck.

The horse-car stables and barn, blacksmith-shop and part of a car-shop at Fair Haven were destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss amounted to $10,000.

The new Tammany Hall Democratic Reform Association met last evening at Masonic Hall, and took steps to extend its organization throughout the City by holding a primary election on Tuesday next in each Assembly district. The Association claims to be organized in opposition to Tammany Hall.

The regatta of the Empire Boat Club took place on the East River, opposite Harlem, yesterday afternoon. The most conspicuous feature of the sport was a race in which five females contested.

The Republican Convention.

The delegates assembled at Saratoga today have a very critical work to perform. No one can doubt that the next Presidential campaign will be greatly affected by the results of the State canvass this year. This consideration alone ought to put an end to that apathy which has so often threatened to impair the just influence of the Republican Party. The question which every Republican ought to take into serious consideration is, whether he is prepared to see the Government of the country handed over to the Democrats. The first step toward that consummation would be to allow the election in this State to be decided against us. There is not a single good reason why we should be beaten. The Administration has done its duty faithfully, and it is strong in the confidence and good-will of the public. Undoubtedly the President himself would be very much discouraged if the election here were to terminate in the defeat of the Republicans. He has doubtless interested himself greatly in endeavoring to provide against such a contingency. That he has singled out any particular candidate for favor, before the Convention has had time to deliberate on the subject, is most improbable. Such a course would scarcely be respectful to the delegates whose proper duty it is to prepare a ticket for the verdict of the people. It is more reasonable to believe that the delegates meet today unfettered by the knowledge that there is only one candidate for the Governorship whom they could nominate with any chance of satisfying the Administration.

The declaration of principles which is needed from the Convention is one of a practical and business-like character. There is plenty of good work remaining for the Republican Party to accomplish. Any measures which are likely to promote industrial prosperity, and to revive branches of commerce now languishing, would be welcomed heartily by nearly all sections of the party. A beginning has been made in the great task of reducing the taxes, and the platform will doubtless contain a pledge to prosecute that task until the expectations of the country are fully realized. The general public have many securities that the Republican Party will promise no more than it is willing to perform. The Democrats can offer them nothing but the prospect of renewed troubles, and a long course of determined hostility to a large part of our internal policy. The return of the Democrats to Federal power would unsettle the very foundations of all that has been built up since 1864. To prevent any danger of that catastrophe, the delegates today must give a proof that the Republicans are still the party of sincerity and of truly patriotic aims. Their platform ought to be one which would appeal at once to the sympathies and judgment of the great bulk of the people.

[illegible] hours we shall know whom [illegible] has been selected to stand at the head of the ticket. It would not be difficult to fix upon one which would doom the party to defeat. We prefer to hope that so needless and culpable a blunder will not be made. If we cannot have perfect unanimity in the party, at least let us have as near an approach to it as the circumstances of the hour permit us to expect. There are some names which would arouse violent antagonism in many quarters, and half-hearted support in others. We need not specify them. The delegates know them as well as we do, and will doubtless take care that they are not elevated into undue prominence. We earnestly trust that the action of the Convention today will be the means of strengthening and consolidating the great party which has already achieved so much for the country, and is able and willing to do more, if the people will again range themselves by its side.

The New-Born Republic.

The excitement kindled by the war will rapidly undergo a change of character. Revolution takes the place of battle. Germany has proved itself the master of France, and is now in a condition to dictate the terms of peace. Its will must be the law. Further resistance on the part of France may widen the area of its own desolation and intensify the sufferings of its people, but cannot essentially alter the result. That is fixed. France, wounded and defeated, must submit to the conqueror. The spirit of its people will chafe under the trial, but their sagacity will be shown by reserving for the regeneration of their country the strength that would be wasted in bloody opposition to German arms. The Republic opens to them a new destiny, which will yield to peace glories denied the Empire and its war.

We assume that the Republic, as the choice of the French people, will be allowed to pursue a pacific course unmolested. The one whose fierce struggle clouded the close of the last century was made warlike by the necessities of its existence. Kings conspired to effect its destruction. Its excesses alienated sympathy, which the gallantry of its struggle did not restore. The condition of Europe today is different. A power has arisen to which even monarchs pay homage. The public opinion which condemned as a crime the readiness of NAPOLEON to make the nomination of a HOHENZOLLERN to the throne of Spain a cause of war, would revolt against the craft of Kings intent upon stifling the birth of an organized democracy. The Republic of 1848 was destroyed by the treacherous usurpation of its President,—not by the action of other Powers. It can scarcely be said to have been a success at any period of its existence. The socialistic theories which crippled it from the outset gave vitality to an element which formed the foundation of LOUIS NAPOLEON's earliest power. From this source of trouble, the Republic which succeeds the Napoleonic dynasty is happily free. The last eighteen years have developed a vast and powerful middle class, whose interests array them against disorder, and whose influence is apparent in the prevailing moderation. There is no trace of the suddenly-unchained savagery which imparted horror to the days of '93—no rankling sense of aristocratic injustice to engender hostility to a class and render their destruction inevitable. On the other hand, we hear nothing now of LOUIS BLANC's national work-shops, and no proposal is made to elevate a man to distinction because he adds ouvrier to his name. Forbearance and good sense have so far predominated. The wreck of a dynasty is good-humoredly swept away. The people of Paris resume the exercise of a power of which nineteen years ago they were robbed. They resolve that they will be their own rulers, and the quiet, orderly inauguration of a republic is evidence of their fitness for self-government.

If KING WILLIAM were honest in his declaration that the purpose of his invasion was to rid France and Europe of a BONAPARTE, and that against the people of France he waged no war, the substitution of a republic for an empire will furnish no cause of quarrel. There is nothing incompatible with this idea in his continued march toward Paris. That is the proper place for the adjustment of the terms of peace. Stern as these will probably be, we cannot suppose that the acceptance of a monarch will be one of them. There are features in BISMARCK's nature which indicate him as a check upon the anti-republican proclivities of the brave old King. The Minister will comprehend, though his Sovereign may not, that a war directed against a BONAPARTE cannot be converted into a war against a republic without throwing away the moral strength of the German cause, and repelling the sympathy with which free peoples everywhere have watched its progress. And the Provisional Government, in its turn, will commit a fatal blunder if it find in the advance of the German armies, or in the terms demanded by the King, a reason for plunging into an unequal contest. If the cession of French territory be exacted, it can but submit. If indemnity is called for, it can but pay. These misfortunes are the legacy of a dynasty which is already odious. Its quarrels the Republic is under no obligation to espouse. The inherent strength and capacity of the latter will be tested by its ability to resist ignorant clamor upon these subjects. Its temper and success in regard to them will indicate the probabilities of its own existence.

For the chances of the Republic are contingent upon its power to guide the passions of the people, and to utilize the resources they still possess. As war is always a demoralizing agency, an attempt to drive back the German forces, besides being in the nature of things hopeless, will bring France so much nearer anarchy. From that catastrophe the friends of the Republic will pray that it may be preserved. It must maintain order as part of the price of liberty.

How far a peaceful revolution in France may affect the revolutionary elements which slumber throughout Europe, it would be idle at present to consider. That it will exercise a large influence we cannot doubt. To make this influence wholesome and universal, the new leaders of the French people must apply to the material interests of the country the energy and the means which the more thoughtless would expend to no purpose in hostilities. The Republic has its origin in the distress and the exigencies of the country, and it may best demonstrate the force and fitness of its mission by laying the foundation of early peace. If there is aught dishonorable in the terms of peace, the dishonor will not attach to a country which, for the time, is powerless.

Newfoundland.

The peremptory tone adopted by the British Government toward its North American and Australasian colonies must, before long, result in vital modifications of the connection of these colonies with the mother country. The affairs of Canada have already attracted considerable attention, in consequence of the growing tendency toward independence, or annexation to the United States, and a fresh subject of discussion is now afforded by some recent proceedings in Newfoundland. The Executive Council and House of Assembly of that island are about to hold a special session for the purpose of adopting an address to the Queen, demanding a continuation of the garrison heretofore allotted for the military protection of the colony; the alternative of a refusal to accede to their request being a threat to discuss the most practicable means of securing annexation to the United States. Whether or not such a proposition could be favorably received so long as Canada remained attached to the British flag is, perhaps, open to question. But the illustration thus afforded of the manner in which the Atlantic territories of Queen VICTORIA are gravitating toward association with the Republic, uninfluenced by any act of ours, is somewhat curious. Without vain-glory Americans may point, with reasonable pride, to the strong feeling in favor of annexation growing up in the alien territories which fringe their territorial limits. From Hayti to British Columbia, from Mexico to Newfoundland, the same desire for identification with the great Power of the New World is finding constant expression.

The Island of Newfoundland offers no inconsiderable attractions to those who, believing that the inevitable destiny of the North American Continent is a speedy union of its various States in one vast federation, are inclined to welcome any action which tends to bring about that result. Of the natural wealth of the island there can be no doubt. Recent surveys by competent authorities demonstrate it to be rich in copper, lead, zinc, coal and other mineral wealth, the mere royalty on which, if properly collected, would yield a considerable revenue. The fisheries are too celebrated to need description, and have formed the subject of numerous diplomatic "difficulties" and conventions between England, France and the United States, which sufficiently demonstrate their practical value to the Government owning a chief right of license. The importance of the strategical position of the island at the entrance of the St. Lawrence is obvious, and, in case of the annexation of Nova Scotia its possession would be a matter of necessity. Everything, in fact, tends to show that annexation at some future date is not merely inevitable, but will equally benefit both the islanders and our own interests.

The British Government has ineffectually urged upon the colony the advisability of its joining the Canadian dominion, and has determined to withdraw the garrison as a coercive measure, the popular vote having emphatically pronounced against such a union. The objections recently raised by the Government of Nova Scotia to a similar course of proceeding are fresh in the minds of most readers, and suggest the possibility of its following the example set by Newfoundland, should the latter make a formal application for admission into the Union. We cannot afford to be indifferent to such an appeal, and even if compelled by considerations of public policy to defer compliance with the wishes so expressed, may feel a reasonable gratification at the desire felt by these sections of the British possessions in North America to place themselves under the American flag.

The Defense of Strasbourg.

While disaster and defeat have dogged the footsteps of the French Armies from the Vosges to the Meuse, the brave defenders of the capital of Alsace have gallantly withstood the onset of their determined foes. Paris expects every hour to see the Uhlans before her gates, and yet, 250 miles away in the far east, Strasbourg still holds out. The grave and devout peasantry of the Black Forest have heard much of the glorious victories that KING WILLIAM has won in the heart of France for God and Fatherland, but they can hardly realize that the plains of Champagne have already felt the victorious tread of their brethren of Prussia and Bavaria, when, by day and night, they can still hear the dull thud of the cannon with which their husbands and sons are battering the unconquered city on the other side of the Rhine. The Alsatian farmer has grim cause to know that he has already changed rulers, but while yielding enforced respect to the Prussian Major who has replaced the native Prefect, he still clings to the faith that he will continue a Frenchman so long as he sees the tricolor float from that tall spire which, for four centuries, has been the pride of all this rich Province between the Vosges and the Rhine.

Little need was there for the Alsatians in Paris to remind the Corps Legislatif the other day that Strasbourg has deserved well of the country. France, in her hour of humiliation, knows that she can point to no nobler act of heroism than the undaunted front which the least French of all her cities offers to the invaders; and the bitterest ingredient in the cup of her coming sorrow would be the necessity of resigning the charred and blackened citadel to that Germany from whom, two centuries ago she wrested it. In cities, as in men, there is something in ancestry. In the old Roman days Strasbourg was in the germ, in the shape of a fortress, named Argentoratum—a bulwark against the Germans who used to devastate the already fertile plains of Gaul. In the middle ages, it stood, in the midst of a feudal fief, a free city whose burghers yielded due respect to both lord and bishop, but who owned no fealty save to the elected Emperor of Germany. A century of determined Protestantism deepened the impress of centuries of freedom, and when in 1681 LOUIS the Great retained Alsace as a souvenir of the victories of CONDÉ and TURENNE, he found in the Strasbourgeois a stubborn and defiant set of subjects, whom it took another century to make into Frenchmen. The Alsatians participated in the bloody baptism of 1789, and gave of their substance and their lives to swell the glories of the Empire. The quarter of a century which elapsed between the storming of the Bastile and the restoration of the Bourbons did more to confirm the national cohesion of France than any hundred years of her previous history. Thus it happens that, with all her essentially Gothic features, in the shape of picturesquely peaked gables, rising above narrow and tortuous streets, and of her magnificent Minster, that grew steadily and German-wise for nine hundred years—with all her German patois and unvivacious German character—Strasbourg is as French in sentiment and sympathy as Lyons or Marseilles.

What the end may be of this siege, prosecuted with so much determination and resisted with such unflinching heroism, we hardly dare to think of. The commandant is a veteran who is capable of blowing up the citadel rather than surrender it. The people are evidently animated by the same spirit, and even the Bishop forgot his character of minister of peace in that of the citizen and patriot, and counseled, almost with his last breath, death rather than submission. When the story of this stirring siege comes to be written by some one participating in it, the record will be worthy to rank with some of the most notable achievements of military history. Not till then shall we know the full extent of the prowess which day by day is being exhibited, behind the walls over which a perfect storm of shot and shell is being rained; and not till then shall we be able to render complete justice to that unswerving courage which preserves one of the few strongholds of national existence left in the prostrate Provinces of eastern France.

Apartment-Houses.

In the Norse Heaven, THOR's house had five hundred and forty floors, and in our close-packed New-York it would seem that apartment-houses, to suit both owner and servant, must in time come to something like the same complexion. Dwellers in American cities used to hear of the sixteen storied tenements of Edinburgh and other European towns with a sort of contemptuous wonder, but if the price of land goes up much higher in Manhattan, the stories will have to go up too, so that by and by it may be quite genteel to live on the sixth story, and by no means fatal to social position to ascend to the tenth. The objection to such "apartment-houses"—the term is used in contradistinction to the obnoxious "tenement-houses" already built—is that the rent demanded is too high. The average rent of a floor, containing a parlor, three bedrooms, a dining-room, a servants'-room, a kitchen, a bathing-room and necessary closets, is $1,200. No doubt this is a higher rate than the seekers of such accommodation ought to be obliged to pay. The landlords, however, assure us that such a rate will yield them just seven per cent. on their investment and no more. It is certain, consequently, that the true conditions that should be combined in these edifices—moderate rent and fair return—are not yet attained. The reasons are tolerably obvious. The buildings are not large enough, and more important still, not high enough. It is impossible, with the given topographical conditions of this Metropolis, to avoid high buildings for "apartment-house" purposes. The difficulty of ascent must, of course, be provided for, and for this there is only one practicable resource, the steam elevator. But the cost of a passenger elevator, including motive power, is said to be $10,000; and the expense of running it, including interest on the investment, is computed at $4,000 per annum. Hence the necessity for size in a house as well as height—so that the outlay for the elevator may be distributed among a good many tenants—becomes evident. That these contrivances are really remunerative whenever there are either people or goods enough to keep them employed, has been satisfactorily demonstrated. An elevator for a house with but two or four apartments on a floor would be an unwise investment; but for such a building occupying a whole block there could scarcely be a more judicious or profitable one.

A writer in a current magazine points out that there are two or three other essentials to the commercial success of an apartment-house, which deserve to be dwelt upon and approved. These are, first, that such houses should be owned by persons who hold them as a permanent investment, thus affording to tenants a reasonable assurance of a permanent home. The tendency of all community-houses whether "apartment" or "tenement" is, for various reasons, to deteriorate. To prevent this, great caution is requisite, and great caution is seldom exercised without a strong incentive. Now, the larger the house and the greater the investment, the more likely the property is to remain in first hands, and the more effective will such prudential considerations become. A second important point is that such houses should be built for a class of tenants who are in nearly a uniform social scale. This precaution has a tendency to preserve the conventional, permanent, and respectable features that are of such moment. To carry it out, however, must be a task of much delicacy and ingenuity. In a very high house, the upper apartments should be either larger or in some other respects superior in comfort or general accommodation to those below. The elevator, to be sure, is, not to be paradoxical, a great leveller, and equalizes to a considerable degree the relative advantages of the different floors. Still, the lower the floor, the sooner it is reached, even with the aid of steam, and there will always in this mundane sphere be a certain prejudice in favor of being "low down" which must tell against the apartments above. An additional argument in favor of large buildings for the purpose under discussion is suggested by this very fact. People are always better satisfied, even with apparent disadvantages, when they share them with others whom they recognize as being of their own degree. There are, it is true, certain difficulties to be overcome connected with the absolute isolation that is indispensable for the apartments, together with a common use of the elevator for the occupants. That this, however, could be managed by a proper system of walls and corridors no ingenious architect will for a moment dispute.

There is no other city in Christendom to which the proper and complete solution of this apartment-house problem is so important as to New-York. No other city grows so fast, is so narrow, or, despite the prospective relief of East and North River bridges, threatens to become so cramped in the future. New-York, therefore, requires the very best systems of both "apartment" and "tenement" houses that can be devised. As yet, we have approached both ideals, but have by no means attained either. The time is nevertheless close at hand when such consummations will become matters of imperative necessity, and it is consequently not premature to originate and encourage discussion likely to conduce to the needful ends.

Gen. FAILLY is, it appears, not dead. Letters from the seat of war show, however, that if ridicule could have killed him he would have been dead long ago. Nothing kills in France like satire, and the very soldiers on the march had scornful rhymes about "DE FAILLY, who failed to be a Marshal, but who, had he remained in Rome, might have been made a corporal." The reason of this military contempt is not that he was beaten like other better men, but that he was so thoroughly incapable to lead an army that he allowed more soldiers to slip out of his hands on the march than he lost on the field of battle, and that withal he seemed to be perfectly unconscious of the gradual diminution of his cohorts.

If it be true that EUGENIE and the youth who was lately Prince Imperial have left Belgium for England, we may conclude that LOUIS NAPOLEON will not long remain a prisoner. Restraint in Germany will be exchanged for exile in England. Why should harsher measures be employed against him? The first NAPOLEON was a soldier to be dreaded. His military skill made him formidable, and the devotion of his men was a reserve of power which his conquerors could not afford to despise. The third NAPOLEON is now a nobody. Any confidence which his success against Austria may have inspired in the minds of French soldiers, has been driven out by recent reverses. He has not the shadow of a pretension to consideration as a soldier. A month sufficed to make Paris forget him even as Emperor.

The Empire must have been a fraud, or a collapse so sudden and complete had been impossible. Six weeks ago it was the bugbear of Europe. Two weeks later it menaced the Germany which has crushed it like an egg-shell. In that interval its hollowness has been proved. Its hold upon the heart of France has been shown to be as mythical as the armed hosts which figured for years on the pay-rolls. The manufacture of a popular vote was easy while a costly organization was in the Imperial service, but there is no longer any necessity to conceal the aversion and contempt with which the Imperial name is regarded by the people. The absence of anger renders the revulsion more remarkable. Nothing that can evince a determination as far as possible to obliterate the traces of NAPOLEON's rule is omitted, but in the demonstrations there is no ill temper. EUGENIE passes unmolested out of a side door of the Palace, and wends her way to Belgium.

The London Daily News of Aug. 24 publishes, as from its "special correspondent," the much-puffed "Gravellotte dispatch" which the Tribune asserts it received from its special correspondent. Now, which paper tells the truth—both or neither? Yesterday morning we received, through the Associated Press, the account of the battle of Sedan published by the Tribune as from its own correspondent. In reality, it first appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette of London. How can that little bit of sharp practice be explained? On three successive days the Sedan-chair dispatch has now been published in the Tribune. It will be repeated in the same journal every day until further notice.

Signs of diplomatic recognition indicate that England and Austria already see in the Republic of France an accomplished fact. No hesitation,—no hostility. Austria instructs her representative at Paris to acknowledge the Government de facto; and England is preparing to cooperate with the Republic as earnestly as it would have cooperated with the Empire for the protection of the interests of the two nations in China. Italy and Spain cannot withhold a similar greeting. Those who imagine that the kingly head of United Germany will make a King for France one of the conditions of peace, ignore all the probabilities of the case. In the days of the First NAPOLEON there was a little bird that sang "the people by and by will be the stronger." The little bird was right. That is a rising tide on which the Provisional Government now floats at Paris.

Italian troops marching on Rome! The announcement may be premature—at least it is prophetic. The revolutionary forces which the new birth of France will see in motion will be felt first in Italy. VICTOR EMMANUEL, unable to repress excitement, may endeavor to divert it into a channel less perilous to his throne. The yearning for a united Italy is universal, and the acquisition of Rome is essential to its fulfillment. Of reconstructed Italy Rome is the proper capital—Florence is a mere provincial makeshift.

Austria has about nine millions of German subjects, and Russia, in her Baltic provinces, probably one million and a half. Nothing more natural, then, that in view of the coming German Empire, and a possible impulse toward Pan-Germanism, these two Powers should show a disposition to seek a close alliance. The disparate nationalities, which compose the bulk of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, have an incurable distrust of Russia. The Poles see in any such alliance their expected autonomy endangered, and the Magyars have long regarded the Czar as the sheep do the wolf. Alliance on some side is, however, an imperative necessity for Austria, and she can only choose between Prussia, which covets Bohemia, and Russia, that has an eye to the Danube. The old epigram about the Hapsburgs must now be read with an emendation. "Bella gerant alii, tu felix Austria nuba."

The author of Napoléon le Petit has returned to Paris. There is something highly dramatic in the changes and retributions that a few hours have brought forth; and that the VICTOR HUGO who was one of the men whom the Emperor could never forgive, should thus have returned from his island retreat to the gay city of his youth, while the Emperor himself is a prisoner, is one of the oddest of the revenges of time. VICTOR HUGO, created a peer in '45 by LOUIS PHILIPPE, yet a democrat, and even a socialist, in the Legislative Assembly in 1848, denounced the secret policy of President BONAPARTE, foretold the re-establishment of the Empire, and was driven from France for his pains. In the little island of Jersey he wrote the bitter satire, Napoléon le Petit and Les Châtiments, which forever debarred him from imperial pardon. Nearly seventy years old, and shaken with illness, VICTOR HUGO expected to die in the asylum he had chosen. It was now impossible, he said to an old friend within a few past months, that he should ever return to Paris. But, as the proverb says, it is the impossible that always happens. VICTOR HUGO is received in Paris with open arms, and his imperial persecutor is a ruined exile.

Considering the close alliance which, for so many years, subsisted between the Governments of Queen VICTORIA and NAPOLEON III., and the entente cordiale which even assaults like those of KINGLAKE, and the escape of would-be Imperial assassins in English Courts were powerless to disturb, the fierce attacks of the London Press on France in her hour of adversity have been, to say the least, anything but magnanimous. When England's time of trouble comes—as come sooner or later it must—we shall find the English Press bitterly complaining of French coldness or abuse, and wondering what has ever been done to deserve it. So different is it when some one else's ox is gored and our own.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Eastmer Bennett.

News has reached this City of the death, in England, of THOMAS EASTMER BENNETT, for fifteen years past Special Term Clerk of the Superior Court of this City. In July last Mr. BENNETT departed on a voyage to Europe—for the purpose of paying a visit to his friends, and also in the hope of restoring his shattered health. He was the son of an officer of high rank in the English Navy, and married the sister of the late Judge HEARNE, of the Marine Court in this City. He was for some time connected with the New-York Press, in which position, as also in the discharge of his public duties, he won many friends by his uniform courtesy and gentlemanly conduct. The widow of the deceased survives him.

During the proceedings, yesterday, in the Special Term of the Superior Court, Chief-Justice BARBOUR presiding, Mr. MALCOM CAMPBELL arose, and in calling the attention of the Court to the death of Mr. BENNETT, said: Of a remarkably obliging disposition, so much so as to impress all whose duties brought them in contact with him, his zeal and efficiency was no less conspicuous. He (Mr. CAMPBELL) deemed it eminently proper, therefore, that a motion be made that the Court adjourn out of respect to his memory, and he accordingly begged to offer such motion.

JOHN E. FOGARTY seconded the resolution, after which Chief-Justice BARBOUR said: I heard the news of the death of my old friend BENNETT with profound regret. He was not only an excellent clerk, but an estimable man. I remember him, I think, fifteen years ago—some years before I came on the Bench, myself. He was remarkable for amiability of disposition, great suavity of manner, and the discharge of his duty with fidelity. An educated man, son of one of the oldest and most distinguished Admirals in the British Navy, he came to this country years ago, to seek his fortune, and he certainly succeeded in establishing a high reputation among the best class of our community. His death is a loss to them and to us; I, personally, feel it deeply. Let an order be entered on the records bearing testimony to his loss, and the respect in which his memory is held.

A Boy Kidnapped by United States Recruiting Officers—His Ill-Treatment and Final Death.

The following letter was written by an Episcopalian clergyman, rector of a church in the suburbs, who vouches for the correctness of the statements contained in it:

To any Commissioned Officer of the Army of the United States:

Since yours is the position of a gentleman, and a soldier, if he be anything but a hireling, is the friend of justice, I wish publicly to ask your attention to the following statement of facts, touching a late lamentable transaction at one of the military stations in New-York Harbor, whereby a young boy lost his life, and a family and neighborhood have been cast into a great sorrow. The boy, about eighteen years of age, was enticed or accidentally enlisted in the army at a recruiting station, under some of the very peculiar circumstances that seem to be the case of such places; his money was taken from him, and his clothes sold to a Jew for forty cents; he was dressed in a cast-off and dirty soldier's suit, and in that condition shut up in a dirty prison-room, without writing material or any way of communication with his friends, and kept there near three weeks, almost within sight of his father's office, a prisoner. Then he was taken out and set to labor at the lowest and sometimes the hardest work, under charge of vulgar subalterns. It does not appear that during all this time any one of the commissioned officers of the post where he was, and there were several, either knew there was any such person, or that there was under their care a youth tenderly reared, of good family and morals, being worked to death by a military rule which, if it improves vagabonds and rowdies, certainly in this case destroyed this boy's life.

Meanwhile, the boy's family, shocked at their son's disappearance in broad day, without leaving them any sign of his going, were thrown into the most bitter misery. Search was made for them, and for their son, through all the aids of the Police and Press over the whole country, but in vain. The boy was a prisoner in a garrison of the United States, situate in New-York Harbor. After some six weeks, by a mere accident, the boy's whereabouts was discovered, and steps were taken for his discharge, which, after much trouble, was obtained. The boy came home and in a few days died, killed, as all who know the case believe, by the hardships he endured while under the care of United States officers.

Now, then, I have tried to state this case with moderation; but I feel that a ghastly and shameful wrong has been done by somebody. I ask you, therefore, as a gentleman and a soldier, to enlighten my civic ignorance by answering these questions. First—Are recruiting offices kidnapping holes at our street-corners, to catch young men and hide them away from their parents? Second—Are United States Army-stations prisons where these young men, when caught, are immured, and are the officers of such stations military turnkeys to keep safe these unfortunates? Third—Is, or is not the commanding officer of every fort, like Castle William say, in your code, a man who is bound to exercise a wise care over his soldiers, as over children, and in case he is, how comes it that in the present instance a boy whose very face and manner would have shown him to be a gentleman's son, was left to be worried with drudgeries by vile contractors, and not one of you in that post opened your eyes to see that the child was being murdered by inches? Fourth—Do you, as officers, leave your new recruits to the tender mercies of sergeants and corporals, and exercise no restraint on the vulgar tyranny of men every way inferior to those whom they torment, and, in this case, destroy?

I have asked these questions to have them answered, and first or last they are sure to get an answer. The boy himself will not need nor hear the answer? I assure you. I myself saw the earth cast in upon his coffin, and no dream of his cruel captivity, such as dwelt with the delirium of his fever, will disturb him any more. But we who are peaceable citizens, and respect the army, wish to know whether that army, in which you are officers, is to be turned into a corps of kidnappers.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

Assembling of the Delegates—A Distinguished Gathering—Confident of Success—Preliminary Canvassing—Gossip About Candidates—The Organization—The Platform, &c.

From Our Special Correspondent.

UNION HOTEL, SARATOGA, Tuesday, Sept. 6, 1870.

More than half of the four hundred delegates to the Republican State Convention, which meets here to-morrow, have already arrived, and the remainder are expected this evening. The Custom-house and other Government officials from New-York, together with a portion of the City delegation and three or four members of the Brooklyn delegation, came in on the train last evening, and the remainder of the two delegations arrived at 9 o'clock this morning. Senator FENTON also came up in last evening's train, accompanied by MARSHALL O. ROBERTS. He makes his head-quarters at Congress Hall, while Senator CONKLING, who also arrived last evening, is stopping at the Union. The delegates, irrespective of factional divisions, are mostly quartered at these two leading hotels, the larger number being at the Union. The Convention promises to be the most distinguished political gathering that has assembled in this State for many years. Among leading Republicans of the State now here are Senators Conkling and Fenton, Marshall O. Roberts, Stewart L. Woodford, Judge W. H. Robertson, of Westchester; Judge Noah Davis, Judge James, of St. Lawrence; George William Curtis, Ex-Speaker D. C. Littlejohn, Ex-Speaker Younglove, Gen. Robinson, Gen. Pleasonton, Gen. Cochrane, Gen. Merritt, Gen. Barnum, Gen. N. M. Curtis, Col. Lansing, Postmaster Jones, Collector Murphy, Police Commissioner Smith, Thomas C. Acton, Thos. E. Stewart, Chauncey Depew, Senators Chapman, Harpending, and Wood, Ex-Senators Nicks, Palmer, Crowell, and O'Donnell, John H. Selkreig, Jas. W. Husted, D. D. Conover, Geo. M. Gleason, Isaac Dayton, and a great many more. An excellent feeling prevails among the delegates; all are disposed to harmony, and the belief is well nigh universal that, with the right kind of candidates in the field, the Republicans can elect their ticket this Fall, and redeem the State from the rule of sham Democracy.

THE CANDIDATES.

The talk last evening, when the Custom-house crowd being first on the ground, had everything their own way, was that Hon. HORACE GREELEY would be nominated by acclamation, but the influx of delegates from the interior counties and from Brooklyn, this morning, has somewhat his nomination is not now so apparent. The country delegates manifest a desire for the success of the ticket above all other considerations, changed the complexion of affairs, and the certainty of and are disposed to take Mr. GREELEY at his word, when he declares that no man has any claims to the nomination and that the most available candidate should be selected. Hon. JOHN MORRISSEY, who appears to take a deep interest in the Convention, is said to be enthusiastically in favor of Mr. GREELEY, and willing to stand liberal drafts on his bank here to carry on the campaign. Among the other candidates talked of by delegates, are Gen. WOODFORD, who will probably have a hundred or more votes on the first ballot; Judge ROBERTSON, of Westchester, who, it is believed, would make a successful run, and Gen. ROBINSON, of Broome County, who, next to Gen. WOODFORD, would be the most popular candidate with the soldiers. It is thought by some that MARSHALL O. ROBERTS might be induced to withdraw his withdrawal if he saw a good prospect of the nomination; and Ex-Mayor OPDYKE also finds favor with many delegates, in case events so shaped themselves as to require the presentation of a new name. The balance of the ticket has received little consideration as yet, the caucusing this morning being confined almost altogether to the candidate for Governor. It has been stated, however, that Ex-Speaker LITTLEJOHN would be willing to accept the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, and, if so, he will doubtless receive it, as his name and popularity as a speaker would add greatly to the strength of the ticket.

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE CONVENTION.

In the organization of the Convention there is a general disposition to avoid a contest between the Fenton and Conkling wings of the party. Indeed, it is the earnest desire of the large majority of the delegates that this old feud shall not enter the Convention at all, either in its organization or its subsequent proceedings. Both Senator CONKLING and Senator FENTON express a wish to avoid it, and it is believed to be entirely practicable to select Gen. WILLIAM CURTIS or Judge PIERREPONT for temporary or permanent Chairman. They will be satisfactory to all parties, and as either of them would make an excellent presiding officer, there is little doubt that the Convention will unite on one or the other.

Ill Success of Wire-Pullers—Nothing Achieved Through the Caucuses—The Resolutions to be Adopted.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 6.—This appears to be the worst Convention for wire-pullers to handle that ever assembled in the State. The delegates know too much, and there are too many of them. Active and uninterrupted caucusing on the candidates for Governor, from 9 o'clock this morning to the present writing, midnight, has failed to bring forth any other result than utter uncertainty as to who will be nominated or who will preside over the Convention. If any change is possible, it is the loss of Mr. GREELEY's strength and the gain of Gen. WOODFORD's. The Fenton men have made several ineffectual attempts to revive ROBERTS as a candidate, who, it is said, would now accept the nomination if he could do so consistently with the grounds on which he placed his withdrawal; but the result has been to increase Gen. WOODFORD's strength, who will now go into the Convention with 150 votes on the first ballot. No candidate will be nominated on the first ballot, and there is not likely to be a nomination before to-morrow evening. The leading names on the first ballot will be WOODFORD and GREELEY, with scattering votes for ROBERTS and Judge ROBERTSON. Gen. LITTLEJOHN declined the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, and WM. DORSHEIMER, of Buffalo, is talked off. Beyond this no names have yet been canvassed for a place on the ticket. The Convention meets at 12 M. Geo. WILLIAM CURTIS is pretty sure to be temporary Chairman. The platform will be not unlike that adopted by the soldiers' meeting today; in favor of a pure ballot, indorsing the Administration of Gen. GRANT, sympathizing with Prussia, and with the Republicans of France, &c.

Active Caucusing Yesterday—Prospects of the Various Candidates.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Delegates to the Republican Convention have arrived by every train, today, and there are here nearly all the members. Caucusing has been going on very actively this afternoon and to-night, and all sorts of reports and rumors are afloat. The chances for the nomination of HORACE GREELEY were strong this morning, but as the delegates began to gather in large numbers, these chances seemed to weaken. It was given out that MARSHALL O. ROBERTS had intimated that if the Convention saw fit to nominate him he would stand, but this was not deemed sufficient by many who wanted a distinct declaration that he was a candidate. Subsequently it was stated that Mr. ROBERTS would not announce himself as a candidate; that in honor, after his formal declaration, he would not. On the strength of these announcements, Mr. GREELEY increased, and at a late hour there were many who declared that his nomination was assured. The Kings County delegation held a meeting this evening and unanimously resolved to cast their vote for Gen. S. L. WOODFORD for Governor. There is so much canvassing going on for the candidate for Governor that the other nominations are scarcely spoken of, though Hon. D. C. LITTLEJOHN is most positively named for the position of Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. LITTLEJOHN is here, and says he is not a candidate for that or any other nomination. For Lieutenant-Governor FREEMAN CLARK, Judge ROBERTSON and Gen. ROBINSON are also named. Judge PIERREPONT and G. W. CURTIS are mentioned as probable candidates for Chairman of the Convention. At a late hour the friends of Messrs. GREELEY, ROBERTS and WOODFORD were still actively at work for their respective candidates, and the chances of success stood in the order in which they were named. Just on the meeting of the New-York delegation was about to adjourn, JOHN V. GREELEY moved that the delegation in Convention vote solid for HORACE GREELEY for Governor, but a motion to adjourn had already been put, which cut Mr. GREELEY's motion off.

Meeting of the New-York Delegation—Organization for Action.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 6.—The New-York delegation held a meeting this evening. Gen. COCHRANE presiding, to take action concerning the list of delegates to be presented to the Convention. CHARLES SPENCER moved that a list be made out containing the names of all delegates, those contesting as well as those claiming to be regular. THOMAS E. STEWART moved as an amendment that the list contain only the names of those elected by the organizations represented in the General Committee. Debate ensued, which was participated in by Messrs. SPENCER, STEWART, and others, when the meeting by a vote of 22 yeas against 19 nays, rejected Mr. STEWART's motion. Mr. SPENCER's motion was then adopted. On motion of Mr. SPENCER the meeting adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Council of Temperance Men—A Platform to be Drawn up.

SARATOGA, N. Y. Sept. 6.—The Council of Temperance men held a meeting this afternoon, at Crescent Hotel, Hon. W. G. GROO, of Orange, Chairman. The political canvass was discussed and a committee appointed to draft resolutions. The Council will continue its sessions to-morrow. The State Temperance Committee, composed of delegates from each Congressional District, meets to-morrow evening. The delegates to the Republican State Convention have nearly all arrived. Four or five other leading Republicans from all parts of the State are also here canvassing and advising.

THE VETERANS' CONVENTION.

Gathering of the Soldiers at Saratoga—Organization of the Body—Addresses and Resolutions—Arrival of Delegates to the Republican Convention.

SARATOGA, Sept. 6.—The State Convention of war veterans, called by the Kings County War Club, met at noon today in the Union Hotel ball-room. Gen. JAMES JOURDAN called the Convention to order, and nominated Gen. JOHN C. ROBINSON as temporary Chairman, which, on a vote being taken, was carried. Gen. ROBINSON, on taking the chair, said that the best part of his life had been spent among military men. It gave him great pleasure to see so many soldiers before him. All are aware of the objects of the meeting; all belong to the same party which saved the country from destruction, and did more than any other for the Union. On motion, J. S. CATLIN, J. F. HALL and JAMES D. FARLEY were appointed temporary Secretaries. Committees on Permanent Organization and Resolutions were ordered, five members to belong to each Committee. On Permanent Organization—Gen. S. F. B. Gates, J. B. Murray, M. N. Curtis, James Jourdan and H. A. Barnum. On Resolutions—Gen. E. F. Jones, Gen. A. Pleasonton, Chaplain Gaylord, Gen. S. Catlin and Col. A. J. H. Duganne. The Convention then took a recess till 4 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention of War Veterans reassembled at 4 o'clock. Gen. GATES, from the Committee on Permanent Organization, reported: President, Gen. STEWART L. WOODFORD, and one Vice-President from each Congressional District, as follows: Col. A. M. Wood, Gen. James Jourdan, Gen. B. F. Tracy, Col. M. W. Burns, Col. R. A. Willis, Gen. Alfred Pleasonton, Gen. John Cochrane, Col. G. F. Hopper, Col. A. P. Ketcham, Gen. Franz Sigel, Col. C. A. Wells, Gen. John H. Ketcham, Col. Robt. Loughridge, Gen. D. M. Woodhall, Gen. A. Alden, Gen. F. Moffatt, Gen. R. W. Judson, Gen. G. S. Batchelder, Gen. J. R. Parlee, Col. H. E. Turner, Col. D. C. Stoddard, Capt. T. O'Brien, Major T. L. Pool, Gen. J. B. Murray, Major F. A. Hickson, Gen. E. F. Jones, Gen. J. H. Reynolds, Col. A. H. Brosee, Major W. A. Bull, Col. W. S. Cameron. Secretaries—Capt. Frank M. Clark, Col. John Hall, Col. A. J. Clements, Gen. W. B. French, Col. F. X. Myer, Col. John C. Cornistael, Gen. Gen. M. McDougall, and Capt. H. A. Kimball. Gen. Woodford was escorted to the chair by Major Rowan, Gen. Pleasonton and Gen. Sharpe. He was received with loud cheers. He said: Comrades, I remember as we stand here today how we went to the front. We never dreamed secession would become treason. We crushed the rebellion and the land is free today. We are face to face with danger worse than rebellion. In the cities of New-York and Brooklyn organized fraud has seized the ballot-box, and a Tammany clique became rulers of New-York. The time has come when we must forget party lines as honest men, and resolve that those frauds shall be squelched. We come for another purpose. As parties grow old, dissensions creep in, and we come today to remind the Republican Party of the spirit which they had when they took ABRAHAM LINCOLN from the plains of Illinois. We come to tell them that the people of New-York demand of them harmony and union. Thanking you for the honor done me, I accept the position tendered me.

RESOLUTIONS.

Gen. E. F. JONES, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported as follows:

Whereas, The Republican soldiers of the State of New-York are here assembled to consult together in the interests of the Republican Party, and suggest such measures and policy as may be thought most likely to harmonize its forces and prepare them for a successful campaign in the coming political contest; therefore,

Resolved, That we heartily and unanimously indorse the Administration of President GEN. GRANT, believing it to have been eminently successful in completing reconstruction, reducing the National debt by means of an honest collection and appropriation of the revenue, and in the time thus largely relieving the people from the heavy burdens of taxation.

Resolved, That in sustaining the National Administration, and in harmonizing and strengthening the Republican Party, we feel that we are fulfilling the duties of the country and finally established its integrity upon the broad basis of universal liberty, can render most important service. We, therefore, while we will support the nominees of the Convention, they may be, still respectfully ask that the Republican State Convention, to be held here to-morrow, place at the head of its ticket a true soldier and patriot.

Resolved, That we believe that if this course be followed by us all local differences will be more thoroughly conciliated, and all elements of the party aroused to energetic action, and go into the canvass with the old enthusiasm, determined to win an old-fashioned victory.

Resolved, That we recognize in the spontaneous and cordial sympathy expressed by the Republican Party for the cause of liberal and united Germany a strong evidence of the vitality of the principles which lie at the ultimate establishment of free institutions on both sides of the Rhine, and that the Democratic Press and Party which upheld the cause of imperial France have been signally rebuked by the march of events, which, under the providence of God determined a despot; that the success that has attended the Prussian arms, we believed has been the course of education, of right, of virtue, and ultimately of sound Republican government will be advanced, while vice, Roman Catholic ignorance and bigotry will be crushed and overthrown.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the people of Cuba, who are struggling for liberty against Spanish misrule, and we hope and pray that our government will, in fulfillment of its evident purpose to liberally fulfill the neutrality obligations, we still hope and believe that it will take every just opportunity to protest, in the name of humanity and civilization, against the barbarous and disgraced the wrongs, and that it will frankly express sympathy with the oppressed and seek an early opportunity to give all the moral support and aid in its power to the people of Cuba in their struggle, and which the sympathies of a free people certainly demand.

Resolved, That in our judgment the overwhelming question of our hour is how to secure to the people, through honest elections, select their own rulers and frame our own laws, or shall an unscrupulous and desperate clique of New-York City politicians, by means of fraudulent registrations, corrupt inspectors, a permanent organized system of repeaters and bullies, and by false counting of ballots to unfairly defeat the will of the people, place their pliant tools in office, and plunder the great Metropolis at will.

Resolved, That this question, in our judgment, affects the entire State, for the corruption of city politics are already reacting into the rural districts, demoralizing the weak and disheartening the strong; the issue is simply this, between decency and honesty on one side, and fraud and dishonesty upon the other, and no good citizen can remain neutral or passive.

Resolved, That we fought against treason when our flag was in danger, and never paused to ask the politics of our comrades, so now we pledge ourselves and all good soldiers of the Republican party, that in the coming political contest we heartily unite in opposing and striking down corrupt men, who today own and control Tammany Hall, and who, through the machinery of that secret society, control the State and rule the Democratic organization of the State.

Resolved, That we ask the co-operation of all honest and good men to help us render this good service to our State.

Resolved, That we will support the Government of the United States and the laws of Congress in defending the right of every voter to his single vote, with the last man in the army and navy and the last dollar in the Treasury.

Resolved, That since the suppression of the rebellion we have seen the public taxes in our cities and State steadily increasing, and in the last year of democratic misrule almost doubled, until they now absorb nearly three quarters of the earnings of every laboring man, casting the main burden upon his shoulders, and forcing miserable tenements upon his home, denying him the comforts of life and paralyzing his honest efforts to provide for the future.

Resolved, That the Republican Party is secure, and that we, as Republicans, will, whatever may be high or low, who by self-seeking ambitions would sow dissensions or encourage factions in its ranks, believing that the only true leadership of a strong party is to be found in the impartial performance of duty by its public men, whereby confidence is created in their ability and their purpose to serve the last interest of the public at large.

On motion, the resolutions were adopted.

On motion of N. M. GAYLORD, private JACOB WELLS, of the United States Colored Troops, was appointed an additional Vice-President of the Convention.

ADDRESSES.

Gen. H. A. BARNUM being called up, came forward to the platform and addressed the Convention. He thought it only necessary to go into the campaign this Fall with a platform in support of Gen. GRANT's Administration to secure the victory. We have seen fraud and peculation driven from high places by his strong arm and honesty placed in positions of trust. The Government of the State today is but a reflex of the personal government in France, which, thirty days ago, brandished the sword on the frontiers of Germany and called on that country to surrender. With thirty days of earnest work the Republicans of New-York may gain as splendid a victory as the citizens of united Germany have done.

Gen. JOHN COCHRANE was called out, and spoke on the subject of danger to our institutions from corruptions and frauds at the polls, appealing to the soldiers to come forward and resist something worse than rebellion.

Col. E. B. LANZING, of Brooklyn, was the next speaker. He said this was an important era in the history of the State, and soldiers should come forward to call back the great Republican Party, and to remember its former grand record. It promised to stand by and support the soldiers, and now we ask them to place a soldier at the head of the ticket.

Col. REUL A. WILLSTIN, of New-York, made a short address, reiterating the appeals to the Republicans to put down frauds and corruptions in New-York City.

The morning trains brought large delegations from all parts of the State for the Republican Convention to-morrow. It is estimated that over four hundred delegates and leading men are now here, and caucusing is going on very actively.

Gen. GLEASON moved that a committee of nine present the resolution adopted by this Convention to the Republican Convention to-morrow. The following Committee was appointed: Gens. T. B. Gates, A. Pleasonton, George H. Sharpe, H. A. Barnum, W. Martin, N. Custis, E. T. Jones, John Cochrane, James T. Hall and Alonzo Alden. Gen. SHARPE, of Kingston, next announced, appealed to all soldiers to rally for the support of the party of the Union, and against fraud and corruption. Gen. T. B. GATES, of Brooklyn, was the next speaker. The Convention adjourned with cheers for the resolutions and Gen. WOODFORD.

THE VERMONT ELECTION.

Large Republican Majorities—The State Senate Probably Unanimous—Reports from Various Cities.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Sept. 6.—The election of State and county officers, and members of Congress and the Legislature, for the next two years, took place in this State today. The Republican State ticket was headed by Hon. J. W. STEWART, of Middlebury, and the Democratic ticket by Hon. HOMER W. HEATON, of Montpelier. A very light vote was cast, though a little heavier than last year. The result is the election of the entire Republican State and Congressional tickets. The Senate will be nearly unanimously Republican, if not entirely so, and the House will probably stand about 200 Republicans to thirty Democrats. Returns from about thirty towns, embracing about one-fifth of the vote cast, stands: STEWART, (Rep.) 6,668; HEATON, (Dem.) 2,012. In the First District, where an effort was made to defeat Hon. CHARLES W. WILLARD for Congress by running another Republican, he has been elected by a handsome majority.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Sept. 6.—The Republican majority in this city is heavy. CARPENTER, (Republican,) is elected City Representative by 300 majority. Scattering returns indicate the usual Republican majority of three times the whole Democratic vote.

THE WAR AGAINST TAMMANY.

The New Tammany Hall Democracy Reform Association—Its Organization Last Evening.

A political organization designated the New Tammany Hall Democratic Reform Association, held a meeting, last evening, at Masonic Hall, JACOB COHEN presiding, and HIRAM JONES acting as Secretary. The organization, which consists of three delegates from each Assembly District, has announced its purpose of making war on the corruptions of the Tammany Ring, and of supporting candidates for office without respect to party, excepting that they must be honest, responsible men, and opposed to the Tammany Ring. At the opening of the meeting, Mr. COHEN stated that the object was to extend the organization, which in several Wards had existed for a year past, throughout all the Wards and Assembly Districts in the City. He said that every one knew that Tammany claimed a nomination as being equal to an election, for if the repeaters could not accomplish the object, then the candidates were counted in. He had gone from the Battery to Harlem Bridge, and along the North and East Rivers, and in talking with the citizens he found that they were opposed to Tammany Hall. He hoped the warm Europe would not divide them, but that Germans and Irish, Americans and Frenchmen, would join earnestly in the movement.

It was resolved that on Tuesday next to hold a primary election in each Ward to elect three delegates from each Assembly District, two of whom shall be delegates to the Ward Committee and one to the General Committee.

A Committee of Conference was disappointed, consisting of two members from each Ward, as follows:

First Ward—Isidor Wolf, F. Schorp. Second Ward—Mr. Von Weltberk. Third Ward—John Smith. Fourth Ward—Mr. Berliner, M. Gollivan. Fifth Ward—Davis Heine, E. Reynold. Sixth Ward—Mr. Peiser, John Cavdell. Seventh Ward—Thomas Gess, J. Hertzberg. Eighth Ward—Charles Conn, R. F. Kelly, Ninth Ward—Edward Grett, E. Adlinger. Tenth Ward—L. Haupe, Jacob Runick. Eleventh Ward—Capt. Kentz, F. Hampe. Twelfth Ward—John Hard, Mr. Middnacht. Thirteenth Ward—L. Keller, Mr. Bernstein. Fourteenth Ward—Wm. R. Penny, L. Burneiner. Fifteenth Ward—R. F. Martin, D. Silversein. Sixteenth Ward—Mr. Morris, T. Bradt. Seventeenth Ward—H. Alsin, Gen. Hausen. Eighteenth Ward—Adolph Bayer, George Stephenback. Nineteenth Ward—T. D. Raynor, Jacob Cohen. Twentieth Ward—Bernhardt Levy, L. Lewinsky. Twenty-first Ward—A. Rathgeber, J. Silver. Twenty-second Ward—A. Baedinger, R. Greenhal.

The following preamble and resolutions were also adopted, after which the meeting adjourned:

Whereas, It is a notorious fact that a few and self-nominated individuals have assumed to themselves the control of our City Government, and have become wealthy, and unentitled and immaterial in their conduct, and permitting none but the elect of their own choice to participate in the councils of the people; that having grown rich on the spoils of office, they have become desirous of a lease of power, but retain the same for the purpose of self-aggrandizement and to perpetuate their influence; therefore be it

Resolved, That a committee of two from each Ward be appointed to confer with all other organizations in the City and County of New-York.

Resolved, That the committee be empowered to make such arrangements as may be important to a ticket which will relieve us of the corruptions and burdens now oppressing the people.

Resolved, That we will communicate with the different organizations throughout the State of New-York for the same purpose in State affairs.

Resolved, That the New Tammany Hall Democratic Reform Party invites all honest and upright citizens to unite with us.

Resolved, That the citizens of New-York shall themselves nominate and elect their own officers, and that we will put down all rings and despotic citizens who have nominated their men by intrigue and elect them by fraud.

MISCELLANEOUS LOCAL POLITICS.

Nominations in the Twelfth Assembly District.

The William W. Cook Association met at their rooms, corner of Lewis and Fifth-streets, on last Monday evening, and after the transaction of the official business of the Association, they unanimously recommended for nomination the names of Hon. WM. W. COOK for member of assembly for the Twelfth Assembly District, Hon. CHARLES E. LOEW for County Clerk, and Hon HERVEY C. CALKINS for member of Congress; and pledged themselves to do all in their power to further their claims for the above-mentioned offices.

Disturbance at the Meeting of the Democratic General Committee of Staten Island—One of the Supervisors Beaten by a Trustee.

The Democratic General Committee of Richmond County met yesterday at Tompkinsville, to make preparations for the coming election. The attendance was the largest and most complete of any meeting ever held by the Committee. There was a great deal of factious opposition, as one party belongs to the old ring, while the others are new men. From the Fourth Ward Messrs. Supervisor BRICK and Treasurer EBE BROWNE were the candidates for a place vacant on the Committee. State Senator FROST at first opposed Mr. BRICK, as he was anxious to secure as many places as possible for his supporters. However, when the Town Committee sent in a request for Mr. BRICK's election, Senator FROST became silent, and the gentleman's election was made unanimous. This very much annoyed the friends of Mr. BROWNE, who is a candidate for the office of Sheriff, as the action lessens his chances materially. When the meeting adjourned Mr. BROWNE made some remarks, and Mr. BRICK charging him with not voting the last regular ticket, BROWNE called Mr. BRICK a liar, and at the same time struck him several times. Mr. BRICK did not resent the assault, and retired, making some caustic remarks as to the relative position of himself and assailant.

The affair created much excitement, and will probably come before the Grand Jury at its next meeting. The interest in the approaching election has become extreme, but it is generally asserted that Senator FROST's party in the island are badly beaten.

Congressional Nomination.

SCRANTON, Penn., Sept. 6.—The Luzerne Democracy today nominated State Senator SAMUEL G. TURNER for Congress, and GEORGE WOODWARD for President Judge, in place of O'NEILL, resigned.

North Carolina Matters—Issue of Bonds Authorized in Georgia.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 5.—Judge BOND, of the United States Circuit Court, will have KIRK's Lieutenant-Colonel (BERGEN) before him to-morrow on a writ of habeas corpus. BERGEN is now in jail by order of Judge BOND.... Gov. HOLDEN has mustered out the white troops. The negro troops are retained, and, it is said, that more negro troops will be recruited. CLARKE's regiment is here today.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 5.—The House of Representatives passed the bill authorizing the Governor to issue bonds to meet the outstanding bonds and interest due before January, 1875; the bonds to bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. payable semi-annually in gold, the bonds to run twenty years, at the end of which time they are to be redeemed in gold coin. The gold bonds are not to be used for funding the outstanding bonds nor exchangeable for them.

A bill passed the Georgia House of Representatives, today, prohibiting whipping as a punishment for crime. The Militia bill failed to pass the House.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.

Conflagration in the Lumber-Yards of Philadelphia—Heavy Losses.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 6.—The planing-mill and plaster-mill of SMITH & HARRIS, on Beach and Coates streets, was destroyed by fire this evening. The fire spread to the lumber-yards of NORCROSS & SHERTS, TAYLOR & BETTS, and D. B. TAYLOR & SON, and a great quantity of lumber was burned. All the buildings were built of wood. The loss on the lumber-yards will reach $250,000, and will exceed that sum if the fire extends to the other yards in the neighborhood, which is not improbable. The fire still burns furiously.

Losses by Fire—Buildings Burned at Fair Haven and at Milwaukee.

NEW-HAVEN, Sept. 6.—About 4 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the barn of Michael EGAN, at Fair Haven, which communicated to the buildings of the Fair Haven and Westville Horse Railroad Company. The barn was entirely burned, together with the railroad stables, blacksmith-shop and part of the car-shop. Horses and cars were saved. The loss is estimated at $10,000, and is covered by insurance.

MILWA

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Matters assumed a more business-like appearance at the Real Estate Exchange yesterday, and though the offerings were few in number, the desirableness of the property offered created an interest among bidders, which showed itself very plainly in the spirited competition they evinced. Three valuable sales were made by Messrs. ROBERTS & McGUIRE, who sold under a judgment order of the Supreme Court—the case involving the sale having been adjudicated by JAMES H. COLEMAN, Esq., referee, and the decision confirmed by the Court. The prices brought are considered to be very good, and the bidding was remarkably spirited. The sales were as follows:

Houses and lot on the north side of One Hundred and Thirtieth-street, 325 feet east of Sixth-avenue; size of lot, 50 by 100 feet. The house is of brick, four stories high; brown-stone front. Price, $17,250; purchaser, Mr. THOMAS H. TAYLOR.

A four-story brick stable and lot, on the north side of Fifty-third-street, 75 feet west of Lexington-avenue. The lot on which this building is situated is of uneven shape, being 30 by 125 and 39 by 100 feet. The property was knocked down to Mr. B. F. CURTIS for $20,000.

A three-story brick house, brick front, having basement and cellar, situated on the south side of Twenty-eighth-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, known as No. 326 West Twenty-eighth-street; size of lot, 25 feet by 98 feet 11 inches—was sold for $17,500; purchaser, Mr. B. HODEMAN.

FINANCIAL.

ELIZABETHTOWN & PADUCAH
RAILROAD,
OF KENTUCKY.
FIRST MORTGAGE
8 Per Cent. Twenty-Year
Convertible Bonds.

This Road, connecting the important points of Louisville and Paducah, is 185 miles long and passes through a rich agricultural and mineral section of the State of Kentucky, the traffic of which, it is believed, will be abundantly remunerative.

Nearly the whole line is under contract, and thirty-one miles of the road are already in successful operation.

The stock subscriptions (of which the City of Louisville subscribed $1,000,000) amount to $3,000,000. To lay the rails and completely equip the road, THREE MILLION DOLLARS of First Mortgage Convertible Bonds have been authorized, bearing eight per cent. interest, payable semi-annually at the BANK OF AMERICA, in the City of New-York, on the 1st days of March and September.

These Bonds are the only lien upon the property and franchises of the Company, and are deposited with the UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, which will pay over the proceeds of the bonds to the Railroad Company only in the ratio of construction.

The most rigid care has been exercised to protect the interest of the bondholders by every legal safeguard. The bonds can be converted into stock at the option of the holder for seven years after the completion of the road. The management is in the hands of some of the most responsible and favorably known business men of Kentucky. With the guarantee of thorough and faithful direction, and the large amount of stock subscribed, these bonds form a very safe and desirable investment.

The price of the bonds at present is 87½ and accrued interest.

FINANCIAL.

Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota Railroad Co.,

Traversing the great States of Iowa and Minnesota. The Road is nearly completed, and in running order. Without competition; with large local and through traffic; an air-line from St. Paul to St. Louis and Chicago.

In recommending to the public an investment in this First Mortgage Sinking Fund Convertible Seven-Per-Cent. Gold Bonds issued by the Company, we subjoin a few of the considerations which we feel authorized us to assert the superiority of this enterprise over any similar one now in the market.

The desirability of the Bonds as an investment is assured by the fact that the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Minnesota Railroad will serve larger and more numerous interests than any other of the Western Railroads.

1. It is the shortest line by 45 miles between Chicago and St. Paul.

2. It is an air-line from St. Paul to St. Louis, ninety miles shorter than any projected or constructed road.

3. It is the highway to the North-west and Red River country. It must receive as feeders all projected and constructed roads north of Mankato or west of St. Paul.

4. It possesses the conditions always requisite to secure a first-class road—namely, a good initial point, an equally good terminal point, and a rich and populous intermediate country.

Burlington, and, through its connections, Chicago and St. Louis, are the initial points; St. Paul and Mankato and the wheat-fields of Minnesota, are its terminal points; and the Cedar Valley, pronounced by geologists the best soil in the world for cereals, is its bed track.

5. The sources of local traffic are immense. Connecting with the great mills of St. Anthony and the Upper Mississippi, it serves all Central and Western Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Wisconsin with timber; and on the other hand, it supplies the same districts with coal from the great coal measures of the Des Moines Valley and of Illinois, which it reaches by its tributaries. The agricultural products of the country are a great source of revenue. The corn of Iowa, the best corn State in the Union; the wheat of Minnesota, the best wheat State, and the immense crops of the great valley lying between the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers, must go over the road, the freight rates for which are unrestricted by any competition. The population of the surrounding district is already immense, resembling somewhat that of the Connecticut Valley in character, numbers and enterprise.

6. The road is now building at the rate of 1½ to 2 miles per day, and is to be completed in time to move the fall crops this year.

7. The earnings on the completed portion of the road will pay the running expenses, the interest on the bonds, and a handsome dividend. The actual receipts for June and July (two of the dullest months in the year) demonstrate this statement beyond dispute. It is confidently expected the earnings will be more than doubled from the connections established when the road is finished to Cedar Falls.

8. The Bonds may be either Coupon or Registered, at the option of the buyer, and may be converted at par into stock of the Company at any time. This privilege cannot fail to cause them, at no distant day, to command a price considerably above par.

9. These bonds are the only mortgage upon the road, and their issue is limited to $20,000 per mile, secured by the rolling stock, road, depots, and the whole property of the Company.

10. The bonds run fifty years, affording an enduring investment, and at the same time assuring the liquidation of the principal by a sinking fund which is fully established.

11. The subscriptions to the stock of the Company along the line of the road are very large, and are paid in with alacrity.

12. The road is built with care and economy, and is under the management of parties of great experience and capital.

13. The road is now near completion, and the bonds only issued against the finished portion.

14. After a most rigid examination into this enterprise, we do not hesitate to endorse these Bonds as being as good and as safe as United States 5-20s, and fully equal to any railroad mortgage issued; and until these securities are placed upon the New-York Stock Exchange, the rules of which require the Road to be completed, we obligate ourselves to re-buy at any time any of these Bonds sold by us after this date.

Government Securities, at their present market quotations, return as an investment the following rates of interest:

U. S. Cur. 6s, with 20 years to run.....5 per cent., cur.
U. S. 10-40s, with 30 years to run.....4½ per cent., gold.
U. S. 6s, 1881s, with 11 years to run...4½ per cent., gold.
U. S. 5-20s, with 5 years to run.....4 per cent., gold.

While the Burlington Bonds return 8½ per cent. currency interest, besides having the prospect of realizing a large profit by their future advance in price.

The above are but a small portion of the considerations which might be urged in proof of the assertion that the loan now offer to the public possesses in the highest degree every point assuring the safety and profit of the investment. The small remaining balance of this loan for sale at 90.

LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN
SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.
SEVEN PER CENT.
Consolidated Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, in the discharge of their duty to pay moneys of the several mortgage debts as they become due, has executed a mortgage to the Union Trust Company of New-York, as trustee, upon the whole of its business and branches, payable on the 1st day of July, in the year 1900.

COUPON BONDS of $1,000 each will be issued, with interest at SEVEN Per Centum per annum, payable the semi-annually on the 1st days of JANUARY and JULY in each year, and REGISTERED BONDS of $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 each, without Coupons, interest at SEVEN Per Centum per annum, payable quarterly, on the 1st day of JANUARY, APRIL, JULY and OCTOBER, in each year, principal and interest payable at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York.

We call the attention of investors especially to this class of REGISTERED BONDS, which, on account of the SECURITY AFFORDED AGAINST LOSS BY ROBBERY, FIRE OR OTHERWISE and the PAYMENT OF QUARTERLY INTEREST, offer an investment peculiarly desirable.

A limited amount of these BONDS can be purchased at 97½, and accrued interest, upon application to

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.
Principal and Interest Payable in Gold.

The First Mortgage Eight Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY are for sale by the undersigned. Price, 97½ and Interest. The amount of Bonds issued is $1,000,000 on 111 miles of road, of which 80 miles are completed, and the grading of the balance finished, while the iron and materials are on the track to complete it.

This road, completed and about being finished, together with rolling-stock, lands, property of every description, and franchise, is mortgaged to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in trust for the security of these bonds. This property has a value more than double the amount of this mortgage. The net earnings of the Company are constantly on the increase, and are in excess of the amount required to pay the interest on these bonds. The payment of the interest and principal is therefore fully secured. The bonds are in denominations of $1,000 and $500. Interest payable semi-annually in New-York, London or Frankfort on the Main. We unhesitatingly recommend them, and will furnish maps and pamphlets upon application.

WASHINGTON.

Appropriations for Public Buildings—Opinion of the Attorney-General—The President and Cabinet—Political Prospects in Louisiana—Treasury Receipts.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 6.—Assistant Secretary RICHARDSON recently requested the opinion of the Attorney-General upon the following points, viz.: First—Are the appropriations made in the act approved April 20, 1870, the Deficiency bill, for the construction, repair, &c., of public buildings, to be regarded as having a longer duration in law than the last fiscal year. Second—Will so much of the appropriations made by the act of July 15, 1870, (the Sundry Civil bill,) for the completion of public buildings therein mentioned, as remains unexpended at the expiration of the present fiscal year, be applicable to the completion of those which at that time may remain unfinished. Third—Are appropriations for public buildings to be considered as specific appropriations for the service of a particular fiscal year, or as specific appropriations for particular purposes, having duration until those purposes shall have been accomplished. Acting Attorney-General TALBOT has responded to these queries with a decision which reverses the positions which have been heretofore taken by the Controller of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Customs, and relieves the Department from much of the embarrassment caused by the construction which the Controller had placed upon some of the restrictive sections in the late Appropriation bills. Mr. TALBOT says he finds that the appropriations made in the act of April 20, for public works, in first instances are forbidden to commence until the happening of a contingent event, and that this condition makes the appropriation in these instances outlast the postponement, whether that does or does not terminate before the close of the fiscal year in which the appropriations were made. The objects of appropriation are the St. Paul, Minn., Custom-house, the New-York Post-office, the Post-office and Sub-Treasury at Boston, and the Marine Hospital at Chicago. Upon these buildings he holds the expenditure is made lawful, after the close of the current fiscal year, by words which plainly indicate that there was no Congressional intent to limit these appropriations in duration to the close of the last fiscal year, which would have left only two and a half months for their expenditure. They are therefore, held to be appropriations for particular objects, having duration until those objects are effected. And this conclusion is applicable to all appropriations for public buildings, furniture, &c., in the act of April 20, and to similar appropriations in the subsequent act of July 15, 1870. Mr. TALBOT does not, however, rest his decision of the status of the appropriation in the latter act wholly upon the same ground with that in the Deficiency bill, but upon the broader ground that the whole course of administration, executive and legislative, from the early days, has uniformly treated such appropriations as for specific objects, and having duration in law until those objects are accomplished, this construction being necessary, that the plain intent of Congress, the completion of those buildings, may be executed. It will be observed that this decision will also apply to appropriations for light-houses, and will relieve the Light-house Board from the embarrassment which they had expected to encounter under these acts of Congress.

THE PRESIDENT AND CABINET.

The President did not arrive today, as some people expected, and he has given no indication of his coming. There are only two members of the Cabinet in the City—Messrs. COX and BONSSON. The President will be here on Friday, however, as will also Secretary FISH, who returns then for the season. A Cabinet meeting will probably be held on that day.

PROSPECTS IN LOUISIANA.

Senator HARRIS, of Louisiana, who has been here for a few days upon business connected with the political campaign in that State, left on his return to-night. He reports the political prospects very encouraging for the Republicans, and thinks there is little doubt that they will carry the State by a very decided majority. It looks now as though there would be a reasonably fair election. The cotton crop in Louisiana will be about equal to last year. It would have been much larger but for the drouth in the early part of the season. The cane crop is unusually large.

LOCKS UPON RAILROAD CARS.

Acting Secretary RICHARDSON today decided upon the lock to be used on railway cars carrying bonded goods. It was determined to adopt a new system, using four locks upon each car, or two upon each door upon the inside. Each door will be locked with the American seal lock, which will be reached through a hole in the door. The Thompson lock now in use will be retained upon the outside.

DEATH OF AN EX-MEMBER OF CONGRESS.

JOHN L. TAYLOR, an ex-member of Congress from Ohio, dropped dead in the General Land Office, this morning. He was seventy years of age. He had been a clerk in the Land Office for a month. His death was caused by heart disease.

THE STATIONERY CONTRACT.

The stationery contract for supplying the officers of the internal revenue throughout the country has been awarded to PHILIP & SOLOMONS, of Washington, D. C., and not Phillips & Blomons, as incorrectly reported.

EXPENSES OF BONDED WAREHOUSES.

The Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue has issued a circular concerning the disbursements of store-keepers' salaries and expenses by proprietors of bonded warehouses, in accordance with the recent act of Congress, which requires the proprietors of all internal revenue bonded warehouses to pay to the Collector the current expenses and salaries of store-keepers, or other officers in charge of such warehouses, and the same, when not paid, may be collected by the same means provided for the collection of other taxes, and all sums so collected in the nature of reimbursements to the United States, for payments on account of expenses and salaries of store-keepers or other officers in charge of such warehouses, or that may hereafter be so collected, shall be carried to the credit of the appropriation for salaries and expenses of collectors, store-keepers, &c.

SPIRIT METERS IN DISTILLERIES.

Acting Commissioner DOUGLASS gives notice that the period within which spirit meters must be attached and adjusted for use in distilleries, under the regulations of June 7, 1870, series No. 5, is extended for sixty days from the 7th inst.

A WOMAN'S STRATAGEM.

Heavy Penalties for a Husband—He is Outwitted and Humbled by His Wife.

The Providence Press, of a recent date, says: Something like a year since, a well-known pair of this city decided to part company, and each leave the other to his or her most desired pursuit. This dissolution of partnership was brought about by the frequently occurring fact that the course of their married life instead of flowing along like a Summer stream, whose polished surface is disturbed only here and there by a gentle ripple, was on the contrary subjected to frequent storms and tempestuous squalls, which rendered existence in unison a burden and a torment. Such being the case, they mutually agreed to part company and each to paddle an individual canoe over such water as was most preferable. Each promised to leave the other in undisturbed possession of what ever property belonged to them individually, and with this contract they parted, the husband remaining in Providence, and the wife going to the home of her sister in a country town something less than a hundred miles from this city. Thus a year passed on, and neither saw or heard anything of the other. During this period 'fortune smiled' upon the wife, who is a woman richly endowed with nature's charms, and upon whom beauty has stamped its coveted impress. She amassed quite a comfortable quantity of this world's riches, and desiring to enjoy them more extensively she purchased a horse and buggy, with which she drove about in high style and comfort. This, with the fact that the 'wealth of the worldly prosperity of the former partner of his joys and the creator of all his sorrows, determined to pay her a visit, and in his secret thought resolved to become possessor of the aforesaid stylish "turnout." (Taking a journey into those parts, he watched his chance and succeeded in stealing the team, and on Tuesday morning started home in high glee, driving the coveted prize. The woman discovering the strategic movement, took the first train for Providence, arriving here about the same time that her lord drove into town with the horse and buggy. On inquiry she found that the law would not convict her husband for stealing, recognizing as it did, the precept 'what is mine is thine, and what is thine is mine.' She then put her woman's wit at work to discover some way to secure a 'come uppance' with her husband. At length she discovered that he also owned a horse and buggy, and immediately she resolved upon her course. Finding where he kept the team, she succeeded, all unaided, in securing it, and away she went, whither her husband is in vain trying to ascertain. For great was his astonishment and chagrin on Saturday, returning from his day's employment, which had made light and pleasant by joyfully contemplating his own shrewdness, to find that the wife of his bosom had completely outgeneraled him, and that, too, with his own weapons."

Christian Associations' Convention at Poughkeepsie.

The fifth annual Convention of the various Young Men's Christian Associations belonging to this State commenced at Poughkeepsie yesterday. Mr. R. R. MCBURNEY, of this City, presided, and Rev. R. R. HOLMES, of Auburn, acted as Secretary. A prayer was made by Mr. THOS. VERNON, of Poughkeepsie, after which a report was furnished, showing the work of the different Associations. Mention was made that Sunday-school and city mission work had diverted attention from the study of the Bible to a considerable extent.

The following gentlemen were appointed Committee on Permanent Organization: John R. Eadie, North Shore; Verranus Morse, Brooklyn; John J. Platt, Poughkeepsie; J. Baldwin, New-York; C. O. Titus, Fulton; M. Cain, Schenectady; P. W. Evans, Syracuse; W. R. Wallace, Auburn; C. P. Pierce, New-York; J. R. Thomas, Brooklyn, E. D.; H. R. Schemerhorn, Hudson; R. H. Wallace, Little Britain; F. M. Smith, Malone; Charles Schlegel, New-York; E. A. Hurlburt, Ordensburg; William H. Fisher, Attica; J. W. Stearns, Greenpoint.

The following were subsequently elected: President—R. R. McBurney, of New-York. Vice-Presidents—A. J. Holbrook, Ogdensburg; Verranus Morse, Brooklyn; W. Cain, Schenectady; J. P. Heath, Poughkeepsie. Secretaries—R. S. Holmes, Auburn; Chas. J. Schlegel, New-York.

The Convention will reassemble to-day.

Work of the Dover-Street Free School.

The Dover-street Free School will make their annual excursion on Thursday next, visiting Fort Lee on the Hudson. The school was established about five years ago by Capt. E. RICHARDSON, and is in a very encouraging condition at the present time. It has furnished food and clothing to a large number of little children, besides supplying the wants of their parents. Gratuitous medical assistance has also been given to the children by Dr. THOMS. The following is a statement of its eleemosynary labors during the last six months:

Number of wives and widows of seamen who have received help during the past six months, 41; wives and widows of landsmen, 36; total number of children who have attended school, 161; children of seamen, 62.

Mrs. JOHNS, a lady missionary attached to the school, has visited three hundred sailors, besides numerous fallen women, since January last, and has endeavored to accomplish their reformation. Her efforts were attended with considerable success. The school is situated in the building of the New-York Port Society's Mission, corner of Water and Dover streets.

Providing for the Nation's Defenders.

The payment of invalid pensions was continued yesterday morning by Col. VAN BUREN, at the Pension office in the Sub-Treasury building. The number of persons present was not as great as on the previous day, but about 800 pensioners were paid, money amounting in nearly $12,000 in the aggregate. Invalid pensions vary in amount from $2 to $18 monthly, according to the damage sustained by the pensioner. Most of the cases are below $6; the injuries in general being slight. This is certainly a small amount, but persons receiving such pensions are always able to labor for themselves. Where the wounds are of such a nature as to incapacitate the person, the amount paid is much larger, as will be seen from the following: For total disability, from disease or ordinary wounds, $8; for loss of both feet, $30; for loss of both eyes or hands, $30; for the loss of one foot and one hand, $30, and for the loss of one foot or one hand, $18. Many soldiers having diseases labor under the impression that only wounds carry pensions, and in consequence delay making their claims within five years after their discharge. In this case they lose their back pension, as the law requires the claim to be filed within that time.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

The ante-mortem statement of PAUL GOTTSENG, who lies dangerously wounded at Bellevue Hospital, was taken yesterday by Coroner FLYNN at that institution. The verdict rendered by the jury at the inquisition, was to the effect that the man received his injuries in the abdomen at the hands of one of the men who assaulted him at Madison Park on Sunday morning. The names of the men are WILLIAM BROWN, EDWARD SHERIDAN and JOHN GROGHARTY. The particulars of the assault have already been published in these columns.

The body of a man was found floating off the Battery, yesterday forenoon. In his pocket was a steamship passage-ticket to Liverpool, on the Cuba, of the Cunard line, through Sept. 3, and passage dated for Saturday, the 3d, and made out in the name of PAT. FERRAL. The body was sent to the Morgue.

Coroner FLYNN was yesterday notified of the death of EMILY HUDSON, an English girl, aged nineteen, who was admitted to Bellevue Hospital Aug. 30. It is believed she was poisoned.

In the case of the child WALTER TAYLOR, who was run over by a Hudson River Railroad car on Hudson-street, Sept. 1, inquisition was had before Coroner FLYNN, at the City Hall, yesterday. From the testimony given by GEORGE E. O'BRIEN, J. R. HILL, JOHN BALDWIN and JOHN E. WHITE the jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

The new railroad connection at New-Haven, with the 11 o'clock night boat from New-York, is proving a great public convenience. The train in New-Haven is waiting on the dock, alongside of No. 1, but is intended to land and passengers reach Hartford, Springfield and vicinity before business hours, and Montreal or the White Mountains in the evening.

LOUIS CROSBY, of Jersey City, a clerk of LEWIS, GOLDTHWAITE & CO., No. 468 Broadway, was fully committed, at the Tombs Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of entering his employer's store on the night of Sept. 3, by means of false keys, and carrying away a full suit of clothes, worth $40. It is understood that the prisoner has long been a defaulter, and that others are involved in the transactions. He had nothing to say in his own defense.

MARY A. BURNS, or her guardian, RICHARD OAKY, are wanted by G. S. MCWATERS at Police Head-quarters. The Government has granted a pension to this girl, who is a soldier's orphan.

TERRENCE LEONARD, keeper of a second-hand clothing store at No. 86 Eighth-avenue, was yesterday charged, in the Yorkville Police Court, by Mrs. FRAZER, wife of Officer FRAZER, of the Twenty-second Precinct, with committing an indecent assault upon her, on Friday evening last. The prisoner waived examination, and was fully committed to answer.

JAMES E. FITZPATRICK, a boy of about twelve years old, was committed by Justice EGAN in the Yorkville Police Court, yesterday, for stealing some old jewelry belonging to FRED. DEHARD ASHELS, No. 412 West Fifty-third-street.

In the Surrogate's Court, yesterday, the calendar of contested cases was called—a very short one—but no case was tried—all being put over to various days during next and the following weeks. No other business was transacted.

IRA PAYNE, of New-York, and HENRY HART, of Poughkeepsie, met at Fleetwood Park, yesterday, for the purpose of shooting at 50 pigeons, each for the sum of $1,000. HART was very unlucky, only killing 13 birds out of 50, and withdrew. PAYNE, out of the 34 he shot at, brought down 42.

The Farmers' Club of the American Institute held their weekly meeting yesterday afternoon. The proceedings were unusually entertaining, and the attendance was large. Prof. LYMAN read an interesting paper on the agricultural future of the sage-brush lands of the West. The cabbage-worm, big ears, diseased cattle, superstitious fears of farmers, were among the subjects discussed. A full report of the proceedings of the Club will be published in the WEEKLY TIMES, ready to-morrow morning.

A handsome new church is now being built at the corner of One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street and Madison-avenue, for the use of the congregation at present attending the Methodist Episcopal Church in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street. It will cost nearly $100,000.

JAMES MAHER, aged fifty-one, was struck on the head by a German named DUBOIS, yesterday, with a heavy garden hoe. Five scalp-wounds were inflicted. The injured man was sent to Bellevue Hospital.

STATEN ISLAND.

OSCAR LUDWIG, a native of New-York City, aged twenty-eight years, was found drowned, yesterday, near Clifton. He and two others were out fishing, when, as asserted, the boat capsized, and LUDWIG and the others clung to the boat. LUDWIG then tried to swim ashore and met his death, while his companions were picked up by the Police, and when brought ashore were found to be very drunk. They were held to await the action of the Coroner's jury.

JAMES NORTON, PETER EASTERBROOK and JAMES FARLEY, while on a bender on Sunday, attacked the house of a citizen of Factoryville, and attempted to break in the door. An officer went to the parties, when they made an attack on him, and attempted to beat him. They failed, however, and were finally arrested by Officers AMBROSE and CORNELL, who were obliged to club the rioters, one of whom got badly cut. They were sent to the County Prison.

Three parties who did not give their names were yesterday arrested by the officials for attempting to pass a lot of counterfeit money. They hailed from New-York, and after a hearing before Judge KILPATRICK were sent to the County Jail to await the action of the United States authorities.

There are at present forty-seven prisoners in the Richmond County Prison, some of whom are charged with burglary, and one horse-stealing.
